Counsel for Dillon and Hurley Protest Newspaper Reports; Ask Postponement

Judge Callahan today dened the motion of Attorneys Edward P. Barry and John F. McDonald for a continuance in the cases of their clients, Joseph F. Hurley and John F. Dillon, charged with being accessories to Herman L. Barney in the alleged murder of Patrolman Charles F. Deininger.

After reading newspaper articles which counsel claimed had prejudiced the public against their clients, the court observed that Barney's act in escaping from Charles

REPORT BARRY TO GO TO THE ATHLETICS

Cleveland, May 28.—Jack Barry is to go to Philadelphia in exchange for Bobby Roth and Catcher McAvoy, it is reported, as the result of a deal between Manager Ed Barrow of the Red Sox and Connie Mack of the Athletics.

The dope is here that the Red Sox infield has been split on the proposition of who should play second base. Some of the players, it is said, wanted Shean to play second base because of his excellent work in 1918, while there were others who thought Barry should be at the keystone.

DIVORCED IN JUST 10 MINUTES

Rich St. Louis Broker Gets Decree From Sallie Currier Stickney, Former Boston Belle

Mrs. Sarah Currier Stickney, the Back Bay society girl whose husband was granted a divorce at St. Louis in ten minutes, charging her with deserting him in St. Louis on January 7, 1918, today refused to discuss the case when seen at the home of her father, Guy W. Currier, No. 8 Commonwealth avenue.

"Absolutely nothing to say," was Mrs. Stickney's comment when approached by a reporter.

Mrs. Stickney was the wife of William Arthur Stickney, a prominent St. Louis broker and millionaire tobacco man. They have a two-year-old son, Richard, who is at present in the custody of his mother at the Currier Commonwealth avenue home.

MRS. SALLIE CURRIER STICKNEY, former Boston belle, has just learned, but refuses to discuss, the fact that her husband secured a divorce in ten minutes in St. Louis, on the ground of desertion.

IRISH REPUBLIC BASIS OF BILL IN CONGRESS

Washington, May 28.—Recognition of the Irish republic is provided for in a bill introduced today in the House today by Representative William E. Mason of Illinois, appropriating $14,000 for a diplomatic corps from the United States to Ireland. Later the bill will be offered as an amendment to the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill.

The bill follows the lines of a resolution introduced in Congress 100 years ago by Daniel Webster, providing for the recognition of the independence of Greece, and also follows a similar resolution offered by Henry Clay to appropriate money for a diplomatic corps to the Argentine Republic.

DANIELS IS STILL FOR BIG NAVY

Testimony Misconstrued by House Naval Affairs Committee, Says Secretary

Washington, May 28.—That his testimony yesterday had been "generally misconstrued," was asserted by Secretary of the Navy Daniels, when he reappeared before the House Naval Affairs Committee today.

"I did not recommend the abandonment of the 'greater navy' program," he asserted. "I merely recommended that it be not incorporated in the present appropriation bill and that it be held in abeyance until we are in a position better to know our needs."

The recommendation of the general board as presented to the committee was as follows:

"The general board recommends that the present authorized battleship program be completed as expeditiously as possible on the present lines of development, and that further designs of battleships should depend upon further developments in batteship construction.

"The general board recommends to the Secretary of the Navy that the six battle cruisers now authorized be completed as expeditiously as possible, but with additional protection, particularly turrets, conning towers, magazines and communications at the expense of a small reduction in speed."

Sixteen dreadnoughts will be kept in commission by the United States navy during the fiscal year, Rear Admiral J. S. McKean, acting chief of operations, told the committee.

"There is no such thing as a peacetime complement," said Admiral McKean, explaining the necessity for having each ship fully manned. "It would be better to take our ships out of service than to send them out with small complements."

Completion, "as soon as possible of the 1916 building program, which provides for six battle cruisers and four dreadnaughts not yet under way, has been recommended to him by the general board of the navy, Secretary Daniels also informed the committee.

Secretary Daniels has already advised the committee that future capital battleship authorization should wait on developments following ratification of the League of Nations covenant and the treaty of peace with Germany; that the American navy should concentrate on aircraft development and production; that a navy base and a training school should be located at San Diego, Cal., and that a safe harbor should be constructed on Lake Michigan at the Great Lakes naval training station.

Ruth Law, Formerly of Lynn, to Try Ocean Flight

Miss Ruth Law has thrown her hat—or rather her helmet and goggles—into the trans-Atlantic flight ring.

The daring aviatrix, a former resident of Lynn, is the first woman to announce that she will dare the difficult course that brought Harry Hawker to grief.

"I'm going to show these men a few things," said Miss Law in Chicago, where she made her announcement. "Glenn Curtiss is building a peach of a machine for me now and I'm going to New York to talk over the plans for my flight with him."

Miss Law said that Curtiss was building a land ship for her attempt. "And I'm not a bit afraid," she added.

BLOCK REPEAL OF DAYLIGHT SAVING

By International News Service.

Washington, May 28.—The daylight savings law has been saved temporarily by the action of New York authorities and the American Federation of Labor. Pending an explanation from Attorney-General Charles D. Newton of New York as to the confusion repeal of the law at this time would work in banking and legal matters as well as the loss and inconvenience in mercantile and business circles the House Rules Committee this afternoon decided to hold up the repealing legislation now attached as a rider to the agriculture appropriation bill.

Newton is to appear before the Rules Committee tomorrow. Henry Sterling of Boston, legislative representative of the American Federation of Labor, asked the committee for time to get the sentiment of the American Federation of Labor.

DECORATION FOR READ GIVEN BY PORTUGUESE

Lisbon, May 28.—The first men to cross the Atlantic by air were sleeping soundly aboard the cruiser Rochester in Lisbon harbor early today after receiving a tremendous ovation, and it was understood that they would not resume their flight to England today.

The Portuguese government decorated Lieutenant-Commander Read with the insignia of commander of the Order of the Tower and Sword upon his arrival here and bestowed other decorations upon members of the crew.

Mechanicians from the Rochester worked over the NC-4 practically all night, and it was believed she was fit for the 775-mile flight to Plymouth. But reports from the cruiser before dawn said that Lieutenant-Commander Read and the seaplane's crew were not astir and that they

OPEN LETTER FROM
SIMON SWIG, VICE-PRESIDENT TREMONT TRUST CO.

TO THE PEOPLE:

Progress is the report I have to make in the endeavor to repeal the law passed at the behest of the bankers which prevents savings depositors from receiving interest on their deposits oftener than once in six months, and which takes from depositors the interest their money has earned on deposits withdrawn within the six months.

The fight between the people and the bankers over this law is being waged on two fronts, one in the Legislature and the other throughout the State with the referendum petitions.

In the Legislature, Representative Alvin E. Bliss of Malden introduced a bill repealing the pernicious sections of the new law.

Under the rules of the House of Representatives, the repealing bill, owing to the lateness of the day, had to be referred to the Committee on Rules before it could be acted upon by the House. That committee, headed by Speaker Joseph E. Warner, held a hearing upon admitting the Bill.

The bankers were there in full force represented by Colonel Edward L. Logan; and Representatives Nichols of Fitchburg and Furness of Everett appeared to be their Legislative leaders. Judge Louis Swig of Taunton made the principal argument in favor of repealing the law, and Representatives Bliss, Hays, Hamburger, Beardsley, Schell, Higgins, Feinberg and Odlin and others also urged repeal.

The committee voted in favor of admitting the bill repealing the law; and the House, by more than a four-fifths vote as the rules required, also favored admission. The measure is now before the Senate, and will be referred to the Committee on Banks and Banking.

Every man and every woman interested in the repeal of the law, which will take from the people millions of dollars in interest, and which penalizes depositors who, through unemployment, illness, death or other misfortune, or for any reason withdraw their own money, should at once see the representative and the senator of their districts and urge them to vote in favor of striking out the objectionable features of the law.

Should the Legislature and the Governor approve repeal, the fight of the people will be won, and it will be many a day thereafter before bankers or other interests will try to put something over on them whether under a true or a false title.

If the act is repealed there will be no need of going further on the referendum, but no chances should be taken. I am working harder than ever in circulating the referendum petitions. The law requires 15,000 signatures, divided among at least four counties. As a matter of fact more than twice that number, or 30,000 names, will have to be secured by reason of errors in signing the petitions. I must ask the many volunteer workers for signatures to keep up the good work which they are doing and just as soon as they have a blank filled they should send the same to me at the Tremont Trust Co., 14 State street, Boston. I ask for more volunteers. We must finish the job we have begun! I shall keep at it, and I ask you to do the same.

I shall make further report later.

SIMON SWIG

GERMANY DEMANDS REPARATION FOR DAMAGE BY ALLIED BLOCKADE

REFUSES TO ADMIT BLAME FOR OUTBREAK OF WAR

By Universal Service.

Copenhagen, May 28.—Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau has sent another note to the Allies, refusing to admit Germany's responsibility for the outbreak of the war, but admitting her responsibility for reparation in the invaded territories.

The note adds that Germany is also entitled to compensation for damages done to civilians by the Allied blockade, both during the war and since the armistice was signed.

Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, May 28.—The Council of Ten met at President Wilson's house to consider the problem of the reparation to be paid by Austria.

This question has been complicated by the stand of the Poles and the Jugo-Slavs, who insist that they should not be compelled to pay reparations growing out of a war for which they were not responsible.

The Italian delegates, however, insist that these new nations must pay their share of the reparation in order to make up to Italy at least a portion of the cost of the war.

Previous to this meeting the big four considered additional changes and modifications in the economic clauses of the treaty in order to offset protests.

Wellington Koo and other Chinese delegates conferred with President Wilson and urged that he give them his support in signing the treaty with reservations in regard to the Shantung settlement.

The Chinese delegates wished it to be understood that they do not wish to delay the work of putting the world back on a peace basis, but they declare they cannot agree to sign away their national birthrights. It is believed they will be supported in their desire to sign with reservations.

By JUSTIN McGRATH,
Editorial Correspondent of Universal Service.

Washington, May 28.—Statesmen and laymen have speculated much upon the qualities possessed by Colonel Edward M. House which give an influence over President Wilson not possessed by any other individual—not even by any member of the cabinet.

I gained some information on that subject in Paris which I think will be of public interest. This information is made timely by the announcement of the resignation of Dr. Sydney E. Mezes, director of the American correspondents assigned to cover the peace conference. The correspondents naturally were more or less unfamiliar with European questions involved in the negotiations for peace, particularly ethnological and territorial questions.

EXPERTS FORTIFY WILSON.

When they sought any information on these questions at the publicity bureau, they were referred to Dr. Mezes. Then it was discovered that the United States delegation had assembled in Paris probably the most notable body of experts on these questions which ever had been brought together. This body of experts were organized to fortify the American peace commissioners in the arguments they expected to make to sustain President Wilson's "fourteen points."

The organization of this body of experts was the inspiration of Colonel House.

Many times during the peace negotiations President Wilson has had reason to bless Colonel House for his forethought in providing him with the most expert knowledge on great questions with which he and the American high commission have had to deal.

If the President and the American high commission had not been fortified with the full knowledge of the territorial and racial questions provided by Mr. Mezes and his experts, there were many times when they would have found themselves hopelessly involved in the conflicting information pressed upon them by the representatives and propagandists of the rival nationals.

HOUSE GOES AFTER FACTS.

Colonel House's great influence with the President is unquestionably due primarily to the fact that the President has found in the Colonel a complement for his own mind.

The President's mind runs to principles—is inclined to shirk details. Relying greatly upon the power of his eloquence, he is inclined to be content with generalization.

LYNN MAN SLAIN IN ALLEGED FIT OF JEALOUSY

Thomas Quinn of No. 10 Harbor street, in Lynn, died early today in Lynn Hospital, victim of a mysterious shooting. Pasquale Tedesco, a neighbor, is sought on a murder warrant.

Mrs. Lizzie Lucier, housekeeper for the slain man, was held in $500 in Lynn District Court today as a witness. The police allege that jealousy was the motive for the shooting and that Tedesco had been attentive to Mrs. Lucier.

Peculiar circumstances surround the case. Quinn, the police say, left his home to go downtown at night. Three shots blazed out from the darkness. Quinn fell, mortally wounded.

WOMAN AUTOIST IN RIVER; SAVED BY A BOY

Springfield, May 28. — Plunging down a steep embankment and over a fifteen-foot wall into the river and pinned behind the steering wheel of her touring car, Mrs. George E. Cromwell was rescued here today by Robert Elliott, a seventeen-year-old boy.

Mrs. Cromwell is twenty-nine and lives at No. 53 Chester street. She is the mother of a boy, six. Driving down Central street in a new car she attempted to turn the corner at Mill street. She became confused and backed the car through a fence that skirts a thirty-foot embankment. The car plunged downward, struck a wall that rises fifteen feet from Mill River, and overturned, pinning Mrs. Cromwell between her seat and the wheel. As the car struck the water she fainted, and lay with her head submerged.

Young Elliott, a messenger at the United States Armory water shops nearby, saw the accident. He rushed to the rescue, plunged into the river and held Mrs. Cromwell's head above water until help came. Several men with ladders hauled the two to safety and Mrs. Cromwell was taken to the Hampden Hospital. She is suffering chiefly from shock, having sustained only a few slight cuts.

TEN YEARS FOR AUTO THIEVES BY NEW LAW

Measure About to Pass Senate Planned to Check Wholesale Car Thefts

A law with teeth in it for the protection of the public against auto thieves!

That's what is being considered by the Massachusetts Legislature. A bill has already passed the House of Representatives, and is now before the Senate providing for severe punishments for persons who steal autos, or who buy or conceal stolen cars. The reason the bill was not passed to the third reading in the Senate was that Senators favoring it, believed that even more stringent penalties than those provided in the bill should be made for auto thieves.

CAN GET 10 YEARS.

Here's the wording of the bill as it passed the House:

"Whoever steals any automobile or motor cycle, or uses same without the consent of the owner, or whoever receives or buys any automobile or motor cycle, knowing the same to have been stolen, or conceals any automobile or motor cycle knowing the same to have been stolen, shal be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than ten years.

"The possession of any motor vehicle, the manufacturer's engine number or the manufacturer's serial number of which has been changed, altered, tampered with or obliterated, shall be prima facie evidence of a violation of this act."

RAISES MINIMUM PENALTY.

Senator Beck of Chelsea has moved to amend his bill so that the minimum penalty will be five years instead of one year. It is possible that other minor changes will be made in the bill.

Representative Thomas Leavitt, clerk of the Committee on Roads and Bridges, and sponsor of the bill in its passage through the House, says that the bill should become a law, because under present conditions the police are powerless to punish the average auto thief, even when they have caught him.

"The justices of our courts," he said, "have not the power to punish the professional auto thief under existing laws, unless the thief has actually offered the stolen car for sale. At present automobile thieves can be sentenced only under the so-called misappropriation act, carrying a sentence much too light for the offense.

AUTO THIEVES ORGANIZED.

"After due investigation our committee could find no honorable reason why a man should change the number plates of his car, except when putting on new ones after renewing his license, and I believe that registered cars found with changed number plates should be considered, stolen ones. In other words, I believe that the changing of the number plate on a car is prima facie evidence that the car has been stolen.

"Our committee is satisfied that there is operating in Boston an organized professional band of auto thieves. The importance of stamping out immediately this form of theft is apparent. There is only one way to accomplish this end and that is to put teeth in the laws, and give the police power to convict felons they succeed in arresting."

Captured Artillery for 'Home Towns' Runs Short

Washington, May 28.—"Shortage of artillery" was worrying the Senate Military Affairs Committee today. One year ago this committee was concerned over a shortage of artillery for service in France, now it concerns artillery for the "home towns."

Hundreds of bills directing the Secretary of War to contribute German artillery to as many towns through the United States, from Kiel, Wis., to Berlin, N. H., have been introduced in the Senate as well as in the House. Senators and Representatives are being besieged by constituents who want German artillery to "decorate the lawn in front of the town hall." Senator Wadsworth of New York, newly named chairman of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, has proposed to distribute war trophies in proportion to the numbers of men who went into service.

BARNEY TRIAL DELAY IS REFUSED

Street Jail gave rise to the publication of the stories.

The decisions of Judge Callahan was reached after he had read excerpts from the various newspapers produced in court. These articles were produced by order of the court after the two lawyers had made their motion for a continuance of several months.

Judge Callahan warned the newspapers to be guarded in their stories of the case, and say nothing to prejudice jurors. He promised the lawyers for the accused that he would make it a point to ask all talesmen whether they had reached a conclusion as to Barney's guilt from reading the papers.

SETS TRIAL FOR JUNE 18.

Judge Callahan set June 18 as the date for trial after District Attorney Pelletier had stated that he saw no merit in the objections of Barney's counsel. Attorney Barry read headlines from three Boston newspapers to prove that the press had handled the story in a manner calculated to prejudice readers.

"ATMOSPHERE OF PREJUDICE."

"We feel," continued Attorney Barry, "that as a result of the articles that appeared in the American and other papers the public mind has the opinion that this man is a murderer before he is found guilty, and they feel that those associated with him are just as bad. We feel that in justice to our clients, and the court must feel as we feel, that it is best to let this matter pass away. In other words, we feel that the atmosphere of prejudice is now present, and that it should disappear before this case is tried.

"The articles, as you can see, contain large headlines commenting on the case, and other views are along the same lines in the news columns.

"I want to make it clear that the Boston American is not to be singled out in this case. I call your attention to headlines in the Boston Post of May 21 and dother dates. Here is one article where they told of how Barney escaped from jail, when he escaped and used pictures."

Attorney McDonald called attention to an article with editorial in the Herald dealing with the marriage of the O'Brien girl.

After looking at the American of May 21, Judge Callahan called attention to the fact that Barney's act in escaping gave rise to publication of the stories.

"I have in mind," said the judge, "the comment on the case in an editorial in an evening newspaper, and also an editorial in another evening newspaper. I will not consider the question of the newspapers at this time in making a decision."

BARRY GIVES DATES.

Mr. Barry called the attention of the court to newspaper reports of Barney's escape from Charles Street Jail, his recapture and to collateral articles. He mentioned the following articles in the Boston American:

May 22—An editorial.

May 22—Story with headline: "Seek Woman in Barney Case."

May 23, special extra edition, story headed: "Barney Tells Story of Jail Break."

May 23—Editorial headed: "Mystery in Barney Escape Must Be Cleared Up."

May 21, in Sporting Extra—Headline: "Barney and Girl in New York —Think Gang is Hiding Barney."

In his address to the court, Mr. Barry said:

"That is only part of the articles bearing on this case. These articles, by means of the wonderful and large circulation of this newspaper, with nearly a half-million readers, have gone into the homes of the people and have left an indelible impression on their minds. This paper has a wonderful circulation. It goes into every home, I might say.

"We feel that fair treatment cannot be accorded the defendants as a result. I feel that a grave injustice has been done my client by this newspaper, which characterized him as an auto bandit and gunman, and in characterizing his friends as such."

BANDIT VICTIM WITH 16 WOUNDS WILL RECOVER

Providence, May 28.—Kanstanty Czybulski, 25, who was shot by bandits several days ago in a saloon hold-up on Huntington avenue here will recover, say hospital physicians. Sixteen punctures were made in his intestines by a 38 calibre bullet.

SAYS BARNEY MESMERIZED MARIAN

Fascinated Women, Declares Mrs. O'Brien, Telling How Gunman Won Son's Wife

Mrs. James O'Brien, mother-in-law of Marian O'Brien, Herman L. Barney's sweetheart, today told the story of the domestic troubles of her son and his spirited wife, and of the love of Marian for Barney, which finally landed the daughter-in-law in Charles Street jail. The elder Mrs. O'Brien made the revelation for the first time at her home in Roxbury.

The girl now held as an accomplice in Barney's recent escape, according to the elder Mrs. O'Brien, has been for months madly in love with him, and has repulsed the attempts of her lawful husband to get her back into his home.

MARIAN BEGGED DIVORCE.

"My boy went to her last Summer, just before he was to be drafted, and made a final appeal that she give up Barney and come home," declared his mother. "She said that there was one man in her heart, and one man in her life, and pleaded with James to divorce her so she could marry Barney."

"This talk took place last summer," explained Mrs. O'Brien. "He went to see Marian where she was selling tickets in the Scollay Square Subway, and begged to see their three-year-old son. It was thus Marian answered his request for the child: 'You're all right, Jimmie, but I'd never go back to you. Another man has my heart, but I can't have him. Won't you, oh won't you, give me that divorce?'"

SAYS BARNEY A MESMERIST.

Mrs. O'Brien although distraught over her family's name having been mixed up in the Barney affair, was charitable as she continued, "I cannot understand the attraction Barney seemed to hold over every young woman he met," she said. "My daughter-in-law, Marian, was, I do believe, a thoroughly good girl, faithful to her marriage vows, until she met Barney. My son and his wife seemed most happily married, and then Barney came. Mesmerism is what I call the influence he had over Marian, mesmerism, and nothing else."

"They met through a friend of Marian's, who had worked in the same store with her before Marian was married. The girl came to live with Marian for a while, in the home in Roslindale, at my son's suggestion.

"Well, it wasn't long before this girl, who then worked at a State street candy shop, told of meeting a young man who was very much in love with her.

WOOED IN AUTO.

"So Barney came one evening. Later he took Marian and her friend for automobile rides. At last, one day, my son came to me and said: 'Mother, "Bun" Barney called with an automobile and took Marian and the baby out for a ride this afternoon. It was kind of him. That ride did them a lot of good.'

"My son was the most unsuspecting man a woman ever married, with perfect faith in his wife," Mrs. O'Brien explained. "I agreed with him, and was glad to think Marian was having little rides with the baby. So the time went on, till one day my son came to me to rest in the afternoon, instead of going home. Roslindale was far away from his work.

WAR PRICES FOR GAS TO REMAIN IN FORCE

Commission Indicates No Reduction Until Cost of Raw Material Comes Down

Prospects of lower priced gas for Massachusetts consumers appeared dim today, at a hearing before the State Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners, held in the Ford building, No. 15 Ashburton place.

Arguments were heard on the question whether or not to strike out the phrase "for duration of the war," from orders issued some time ago to practically all gas light companies of the State in prescribing fixed prices.

These prices generally were higher than normal on account of war conditions. The understanding was at that time that the prices should return to the pre-war level as soon as peace was signed.

The commissioners stated today their conviction that the times were not yet normal, and that present prices must prevail until raw materials were cheaper.

The principal speaker against lower prices was Albert Pillsbury, former attorney-general, who spoke for several companies. Among the remonstrants were Philip A. Hendrick, A. E. Norton of Belmont, Ralph C. Estey of Attleboro, Frederick H. Margeson, city solicitor of Haverhill; Danell J. Murphy, city solicitor of Lawrence; C. A. Bunker of Wellesley, T. G. Hammond of Northampton, M. J. Reardon and Mayor Sullivan of Salem, and William H. Fay of Peabody.

The remonstrants urged that the order be nto made for an indefinite period, but that a time limit for present prices be set. The reply of the commissioners to this was that such a condition might work a hardship on the public by delaying lower prices whn circumstances warranted a decrease in price before the date set.

RHINELAND MAY BE SET APART FROM PRUSISA

Berlin, via London, May 28.—The Rhineland may separate from Prussia and establish itself into an independent state. One newspaper in Aix-la-Chapelle says the separation may take place within a few days as 50,000 persons have signed a petition in favor of the movement. The German press generally is condemning the efforts of certain leaders in the Rhineland district to bring about the change.

NO TRANSPORTS LISTED FOR ARRIVAL HERE

The Northeastern Department has no ships on its list for debarkation at the port of Boston, at the present time. The transport T[illegible], which was due here, has been diverted to New York. It is stated at the headquarters, however, that they may receive notice at any time of a transport coming here, such notices being received usually about three days before the transport arrives.

NC-3 CREW'S BATTLE AGAINST DEATH TOLD BY PILOT RICHARDSON

THRILLING ESCAPES FROM DISASTER DESCRIBED

By COMMANDER HOLDEN C. RICHARDSON,
Pilot of the United States Navy Seaplane NC-3.

Copyright, 1919, by Universal Service.

Lisbon, May 27.—After leaving Trepassey Friday evening all went well with us until 9:30, New York time, Saturday morning. At that time we had covered 1,200 knots, or 1,380 land miles, in 15.5 hours.

From the time we passed Station Ship No. 13 we had passed through five hours of rain squalls and fog, so thick at times as to make it impossible to see the horizon or the surface of the ocean.

We had sighted no patrols after passing Destroyer No. 13 and considered it advisable to make a sea landing in order to determine our position. The only vessel we had seen was far off to the southward of our course, as we figured later. It probably was the U. S. S. Marblehead.

DECIDE TO LAND ON THE SEA.

From the appearance of the sea, a landing seemed feasible and the division commander, after consultation with the pilots, agreed to make the attempt, because our gas supply was running low and it was essential to employ what we had to the best advantage. Besides, in the frequent squalls, it was not impossible that we should suddenly run into land, with mountains ahead.

Accordingly, we swung around for a spiral landing, and, approaching the surface cautiously, picked a suitable opportunity, throttled the engines close to the surface and made contact. The first contact was on the crest of a sharp wave which dropped from under us; the next was on the far side of the next wave, in a deep hollow.

We hauled up well and stalled the engine, expecting to stick, but this was also dropped sharply and let us fall heavily on the sharp crest of the following wave.

The last blow was a sharp one and examination showed that the hull had been severely damaged. The tubular struts of the front centre engine were bent like a bulldog's legs and the flying wires in the engine panels were very slack, due to the settling of the wings. The aileron leads also were slack.

Further examination showed the hull to be leaking forward, but not dangerously. The hull longitudinals were buckled and cracked, as well as several floor frames. The bottom planking still held, but the principal bulkheads were damaged locally where they delivered their load to the main hull trusses. One truss wire was carried away.

IMPRACTICAL TO CONTINUE.

It was at once apparent that it would be impracticable to resume the flight, even if the surface were smooth, which was not the case. Ten to twelve foot waves were running, super-imposed on a heavy ground swell.

From our supposed position, which we later confirmed, we were about forty-five miles southwest of Horta. The wind favoring us, we started to sail astern on a course that would take us toward the Azores. About 2 p. m. we intercepted a wireless report that NC-4 was at Horta alongside the Columbia and ready to proceed to Ponta Delgada the next day. NC-1 was reported down with a damaged left wing and the search for her was on.

On the following morning, Sunday, I stood the 2 to 4 watch. At about 2.30 the seas increased and while coasting down the face of a big wave the lower elevator caught in the water, wrenching the tail badly and starting the elevator to carry away. At 4 o'clock it was trailing on the edge of the left lower wing and caught and broke the tails of the wing ribs. We soon decided to cut away the broken portion.

Just twenty-two hours after landing the left tip broke away and put us in serious condition. One of the crew had to go out on the right wing tip to keep the left wing from going under.

S O S CALLS NOT ANSWERED.

We again tried a broadcast S O S giving our position and asking for assistance. We also flew our ensign as a distress signal. We got no acknowledgments. We could not open up the port engine because it threw the screw into the waves and also made it pound so hard on the rough seas that there was danger of starting serious leakage.

We found it necessary to man the controls and sail astern and to prevent the plane from yawing. The two pilots, assisted by the pilot-engineer, stood watch and watch until we tied up at Ponta Delgada.

At 8:37 a. m., New York time, Sunday, we sighted Pico in a bank of land clouds. Bearings and a sun sight enabled us to locate ourselves as forty-five miles southeast of Pico. We had two hours' gas left and debated whether we should attempt to taxi in to land. It looked impracticable, however, in the heavy sea running and would certainly have involved the loss of our right wing float and probably serious damage to the hull.

The idea, therefore, was abandoned in favor of sailing to leeward and trusting that the wind would remain favorable so as to permit us to make the course that would carry us northward of St. Michael, through the patrol set for NC-4 between Horta and Ponta Delgada and possibly in the route of shipping.

This decision was arrived at after serious misgivings. It involved another night at sea and it was hard to give up the sight of land. The seas were running at times thirty feet high and a 40 to 45 knot wind was blowing. Constant vigilance was necessary at the controls to keep from yawing and losing our remaining float.

COASTING AT HIGH SPEED.

The danger was very real because some of the waves were curling and at times we would coast as if on a surf board at a speed close to twenty-five knots. The stern board took away some of our power to control our course, because it reduced the speed relatively to the tail surfaces.

The right wing had lost its trailing edge, the lower elevator was catching but frequently, several hinges were gone and the violent jerks were racking the tail and wrecking the upper elevator.

In the meantime we learned by stern necessity how to fly backward. Only once in a while were we caught by cross seas, which put our left wing tip under. The cross chop was the most difficult to handle. The wave crests frequently jammed the lower wings at mid-length, carrying away the wing ribs by a steady process of disintegration.

We had to slash the lower wings to prevent them forming water pockets and loading the wings, as the seas would wash over the right tip float constantly. It was necessary to tighten the float, bracing frequently to take up the slack caused by the continual racking. This meant nearly always that the man on the wing would get drenched.

Our eyes were strained and tired by the long vigil. Frequently we thought we saw searchlights or lights of vessels, only to find that it was only a spouting wave peak or the phosphorescence of a white cap.

Early Monday morning we had heavy rain squalls and a driving wind. About 6 o'clock, Greenwich time (2 a. m. New York time), the wind direction changed, and for two hours or so the best course we could make was southeast. This was extremely discouraging, because a sight on the moon and the star Arcturus determined our position as practically due west of St. Michael. The new course would carry us to the south, with the possibility of missing the islands entirely.

COURSE WAS CHANGED.

Fortunately after the squall was over we were able to resume our course, due east. A sun sight about 9 a. m., Greenwich time, showed that St. Michael should be sighted shortly dead ahead. Visibility now improved rapidly. While Commander Towers was communicating the news to the pilots, Boatswain Moore sighted land ahead at 10.25, Greenwich time. The land was soon made out to be St. Michael.

The effect of the discovery was remarkable. All hands fully realized the seriousness of the situation and the consequences that might at any time follow the loss of the right wing tip float. But aside from making preparations to have fresh water available in case we should capsize and providing lashings to fasten us to the wreckage, no one communicated his thoughts to the others.

MENACE TO PLANE.

Now, however, with land in sight and danger past, all hands cheered up and came out on deck and spirits rose readily as the land became plainer. It was impossible to steer so that we should make Ponta Delgada with certainty.

We sampled the emergency ration, which we found rather unpalatable and rather salty, though the chocolate cakes were fine. We also tried once more to use the radio again, but without success, though we were able to hear the Columbia at Horta.

Soon after dawn we had put over two canvas buckets at a drag to keep us from making too much sternway and from yawing. The plan worked well and reduced greatly the frequency of the tail dip. We also tried oil on the water, but we were making too much headway for that to be effective.

The lower elevator finally broke clear of the tail and hanging by one wire, would charge around violently, sometimes in the air, sometimes in the water, delivering violent blows to the elevator control and sometimes to the rudders. At other times it would charge through the water toward the stern, threatening to knock holes in the hull, but just missing. Finally it broke loose and the menace was over. We tried a sea anchor, but it was carried away in about three minutes.

About 16:00, Greenwich (noon New York time) on Monday it was apparent we would make Ponta Delgada in about two hours. We were making about six knots at the time. Soon after we ran into another heavy rain squall and a sharp shift of wind. Our bucket drag was carried away, letting the plane yaw badly and the left lower wing went under.

COUPLE IN LOVE SUIT ARE ARRESTED IN RAID

Mrs. Theodore Gladding, wife of a well-to-do Bristol, R. I., resident taken into custody at Providence with Richard Williams, official of a rubber company, charged with a statutory offence. Williams is also the defendant in a $10,000 suit for alienation of affections brought by Mrs. Gladding's sixty-two-year-old husband.

Providence, May 28.—Sheriffs broke down the door of a room in a Carpenter street lodging house here today and took out Richard Williams, 34, official in a rubber company, and Mrs. Theodore Gladding, young wife of a well-to-do resident of Bristol. Both, according to the sheriffs, were in night attire.

Williams had already been named as the defendant in a $10,000 suit for alienation of affections, brought by Gladding, and it was to serve the warrant that Deputy Sheriff Herman Paster broke into the room. Shortly afterward, however, Williams and Mrs. Gladding were arrested charged with a statutory offence.

Williams is married and his family is prominent socially as well as commercially. Mrs. Gladding, who is thirty-four, recently brought suit for divorce from her sixty-two-year-old spouse, alleging non-support.

The officers raided the lodging house after an all-night vigil in a neighboring building, from which they saw the couple enter. Their raid was dramatic, and Mrs. Gladding, according to Deputy Sheriff Paster, tried to hide in a clothes closet. Williams refused to comment on his plight.

Williams was taken to Providence County courthouse, where at first he was held on the civil warrant for alienation of affections. As soon as he got bail, however, William H. McSoley, Gladding's lawyer, secured a criminal warrant on the statutory complaint. A similar warrant was served on Mrs. Gladding, and for a short time they were lodged in the same cell. The woman broke down when taken into custody and raved against her husband for what she called "his 'vindictiveness and puerile spite.'"

The arrest has created a sensation here. Mrs. Gladding is the niece of the late Frank Jones, Portsmouth, N. H., brewer, and was a leader in social activity there until her marriage in 1910.

HOSELESS LEGS LATEST STYLE IN PARIS

Fashion Set by Mannequins at Races, to Eliminate Stockings at $10 or More a Pair

By International News Service.

Paris, May 28.—The hoseless leg has come. "Nothing below the knee" is the newest edict of fashion, so the Paris mannequins are appearing in the paddock of the fashionable Longchamps race track without stockings.

For the ultra-chic the shadow stocking is no more, at least during the coming Summer, and all of the smart women of Paris are welcoming the change. For plain undecorated flimsy silk hose now sell at $10 the pair, and after a few days' wear "ladders" begin to form in them and they have to be discarded, and all the time they merely gave the illusion of bare legs anyhow.

It remained for the fashionable arbiters of the Rue De la Paix to discover that the real thing would be more effective and cheaper, and as they do not sell stockings anyhow the dressmakers sent their beautiful mannequins to the opening of the Longchamps race course with a chilly feeling about the legs.

Milk white calves were displayed beneath the knees, very short dresses which are still in vogue for the Spring season as if to insure that the bare legs will get the proper amount of attention—they did.

The shoes are worn low—cut with leather thongs criss-crossed about the ankles. About 50 per cent. of the women wore bracelets of silver or gold about the ankle; they are extremely light and some of them have bells attached which tinkle when the wearer walks. At the same time the anklets threw off dazzling rays in the warm afternoon sunshine.

CHINAMAN JAILED FOR FAILURE TO PAY FINE

Chin Wah of Springfield, indicted on the charge of having smuggled opium in his possession, was fined $250 by Judge Morton in the United States District Court before whom he pleaded guilty. He was remanded to the East Cambridge jail on being unable to pay the fine.

He is the first Chinaman to be committed to jail, within a year and a half, for failing to pay a fine.

SAY WILSON MISLED ON U. S. OPINION OF DRY LAW

New York, May 28.—Regret that President Wilson has been "so misled as to the state of public opinion" as to recommend repeal of war-time prohibition, has been expressed in resolutions adopted at the annual meeting of the trustees of the Anti-Saloon League of New York. Congress was called upon to enact immediately "adequate legislation" to enforce not only the prohibition amendment to the constitution, but the emergency act."

SHIPPING BOARD CREATES COAL EXPORT DIVISION

Washington, May 28.—Creation of a new department, to be known as the department of coal exports, is announced by the United States Shipping Board.

It will be under the direct control of the bulletin of operations, of which John H. Rosseter is director, and H. Y. Saint, formerly head of the foreign trade bureau, Seattle Chamber of Commerce, will have charge.

MARTIAL LAW TO BE CALLED IN CANADA

Workmen in Four More Places Go Out in Sympathy With Winnipeg Strikers

Ottawa, Ont., May 28.—Immediately upon his return from the peace conference in Paris, Sir Robert Borden, prime minister of Canada, called a meeting of the Cabinet to deal with the strike situation in Western Canada.

Workmen in Brandon, Regina, Calgary and Edmonton have gone out in sympathy with the Winnipeg strikers.

Martial law probably will be declared in Winnipeg.

The government has been notified that Western Union men probably will walk out, completely isolating Western Canada.

At Toronto labor leaders today postponed a call for a general strike until Friday morning at 10 o'clock in order to give the Dominion government at Ottawa opportunity to decide on the demands of the workers for a forty-eight-hour week and the right of collective bargaining. The strike was scheduled for 10 o'clock this morning.

Winnipeg, Man., May 28.—Martial law is imminent in Winnipeg and prospects of a settlement now seem as remote as when the general strike was at first called on May 15.

The first indication of the intention of the government to deal severely with the strikers came when mounted police were ordered to tender mail to the railway clerks, and, if they refused to accept it, to take the clerks from the cars.

If this is done, the labor leaders declare, running crews on the trains will strike in sympathy. This would result in a transportation tie-up throughout all Western Canada.

The strikers are openly asserting that the strike will spread over the entire dominion as a result of strikes at Edmonton and Calgary. Public utilities, however, are not affected in these cities.

The Twenty-seventh Battalion, arriving from overseas, was ordered into barracks to reinforce the present military forces.

TO ENLARGE WORK OF CHURCH FEDERATION

The complete reorganization of the Greater Boston Federation of Churches, with a paid executive secretary and an enlarged program of work, will be recommended tonight by a special committee at the annual meeting in Old South Church. Sanford Bates, Penal Commissioner; Rev. Austen K. de Blois, D. D., pastor of the First Baptist Church; Rev. Alexander Mann, D. D., rector of Trinity Church, and Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, D. D., of the Methodist Church, will be the speakers.

RUM BANISHED FROM MEDFORD FOR ALL TIME

No more will the aroma of Medford rum cling to the very name of the city, for today Medford has banished rum, or any possibility of rum, from its confines. The Board of Aldermen has refused to grant even a liquor transport license. The only applicant for such a license was the American Railway Express, and the refusal served to put the city on record as refusing in any way to countenance the presence even of good old Medford rum within its boundaries.

EVERETT DECIDES ON JULY 4 FOR WELCOME

POLICE PROBING CAUSE OF RIOT AT YALE

Two Civilians Claim to Have Been Fired Upon From College Dormitory Window

New Haven, Ct., May 28.—Bolshevist influence is blamed by Mayor Fitzgerald in part for the revival, after a lapse of many years, of the "town and gown" rioting which broke loose in this city when a mob made up of a small proportion of soldiers and a much larger proportion of town boys, and numbering several thousand, mobbed a number of Yale students, causing serious injury to at least a dozen, attempted unsuccessfully to storm the Yale campus, broke hundreds of windows in the Yale buildings and damaged much private property. Two civilians who were shot were resting comfortably in the hospital today, neither wounded seriously.

POLICE PROBE SHOOTING.

The Yale Daily News today laid the blame at the door of the newspapers which had yesterday printed stories to the effect that trouble was brewing as a result of insults alleged to have been passed by Yale students upon men of the 102nd Regiment who paraded by the campus last Saturday.

Two of the six men arrested in connection with the rioting were tried and their cases disposed of by Judge Hoyt in the Police Court today.

John Fredericks, a service man, caught by Chief of Police Smith in throwing a stone through a window of Osborne Hall, pleaded guilty to a charge of injury to property and was fined $50 and costs. Albert Macri of No. 77 Monroe street, pleaded guilty to a breach of the peace and assault on an unknown student who was one of those beaten up in the centre of the city and was sentenced to fifteen days in jail. He is not a service man.

CASES CONTINUED.

The cases of John Perry, John D. Hough and Hugh D. Clement, Yale students arrested on charge of having concealed weapons in their possession following the shooting of two men near the campus, were continued until June 3.

The case of Gennaro Giangrande, alias Grant, who was arrested as a result of an incendiary speech which he made on the steps of Osborne Hall was also continued for investigation.

Mayor Fitzgerald said later today that he was convinced that men of the 102d Regiment had little to do with the rioting and that the trouble was largely due to a rowdy element of town boys.

YALE HEADS BROKEN.

Several Yale students suffering from broken heads or damaged faces were reported as comfortable today. Among them were Harvey Childs of Pittsburgh, Captain Jim Braden of the Yale track team, William T. Montgomery and George W. Drayton, whose home addresses are unknown. Drayton may have a fracture of the skull. Numerous civilians, mistaken by the mobs for students and ruthlessly assaulted, were nursing cuts and bruises today.

It was the consensus of opinion today that only the fact that the Yale men were held in check by such leaders as Coach Abbott of the Yale crew, Dean Frederick Jones and prominent graduates, and kept within the campus confines prevented a bloody battle with the mobs that surged though the central streets.

U. S. DECIDES NOT TO DEPORT WERNER HORNE

Fredericton, N. B., May 28. — The decision of the United States authorities to deport Werner Horne, accused of attempting to destroy the International Bridge at Vanceboro in 1915, has been reconsidered.

The information was contained in a message to the attorney-general of New Brunswick, who was preparing to try Horne as soon as his surrender to the Canadian authorities took place. Canada will probably start extradition proceedings.

CAMBRIDGE REALTY MAN ARRESTED

Arthur W. Jones, 40 years old, of No. 159 Auburn street, Cambridge, a real estate broker, was arrested, charged with the larceny of $600 in money. It is alleged that Jones obtained the money in a real estate deal with Frank C. Murdock of School street, Watertown.

AUSTRIAN GENERALS TO AID CZECHO-SLOVAKIA

He bequeaths to his grandson, John Fox Slater, "the gold medal presented by Congress" to his father. To his friend, Comrade Blackstead of Torquay, Devonshire, England, he donates a picture by Martha [illegible] called "The Ship Will Sail." Other pictures worth $250,000 are left to his widow, Mrs. Slater.

Other bequests are: Norwich Free Academy, Norwich, Conn., $100,000; Slater Library, Jewett City, Conn., $12,000; William W. Backus Hospital, Norwich, Conn., $100,000. The remainder of his estate is left to his widow.

ASK MRS. EATON AS TO HOUSE AND MONEY

Sons-in-Law She Is Suing File Questions in the Supreme Court

Certain interrogatories have been filed in the Supreme Court by the two sons of the late Charles F. Eaton, who are being sued by Mrs. Ella F. Eaton, who seeks to have the sons return to the Eaton estate certain money and properties that Charles S. Eaton turned over to them in violation, she claims, of the ante-nuptial contract.

The interrogatories are whether, since the death of Mr. Eaton, Mrs. Eaton has occupied the Pasadena house built by her husband at the time of their marriage and furnished at a cost of about $187,000; whether she claims any rights in the house as against Mr. Eaton's estate, whether she claims ownership of any of the furniture in the house, and how much money during the time she lived with Mr. Eaton she received from him.

The Pasadena house referred to was transferred by Mr. Eaton at the time of separation to a California corporation known as the Boston Holding Company, the entire stock of which was held by Charles S. Eaton and his sons.

SCHOOL OFFICIALS, IN ASSAULT CASE, FINED

Hopkinton, May 28.—School Superintendent W. S. Lyman and School Committeeman Edward Condon were found guilty in Hopkinton District Court today of having assaulted School Committeeman T. J. Elliott at an April meeting of the committee and were fined $10 each. They appealed. Superintendent Lyman was found not guilty of disturbing the peace. The evidence in this case, which has stirred Hopkinton greatly, was heard on May 7 by Judge F. E. Morris of Hudson. Judge Morris mailed his finding to the court. Trial Justice D. J. Riley, who held court today, announced the decision and imposed the fines.

SENTENCED IN IMMORAL CASE, ENTERS APPEAL

Salem, May 28.—Anastius Kiriaken was sentenced to a year in the House of Correction today for having in his possession an immoral picture. Kiriaken was discharged in Superior Court yesterday after clearing himself of grave statutory charges preferred by his wife. He appealed from today's sentence and Judge Hattis in District Court fixed bail at $500.

'CROIX D'AMOUR' GIVEN EDWARDS BY MOTHERS

Original Poem of Laudation Read by Mrs. Anne B. Wheeler at Presentation

Major-General Clarence R. Edwards received today the "Croix D'Amour" from seven mothers of Greater Boston, who called at his home, No. 63 Commonwealth avenue, and thanked him for his kindness and good will he had shown the doughboys.

General Edwards was very much touched by the mothers' greeting. "I esteem their affection and good words the highest tribute that has yet come to me," remarked the general.

They presented him a large leather traveling bag. Mrs. Anne B. Wheeler of Newton made the following speech:

"General Edwards, I salute you!

"As a mother of two sons, who served their country, one as ensign in the navy, one as a lieutenant in the army, I have been greatly touched by the spirit of kindliness and good fellowship which has existed between yourself and the boys who were near enough to feel your wonderful influence for good.

"No deed of heroism can match the desire to serve, even 'the least,' that welled up in your great universal heart."

Mrs. Wheeler afterwards recited an original poem as follows:

TO GENERAL EDWARDS,
Who Won the Unique Decoration, the Croix d'Amour.

There are many kinds of crosses
Which adorn the hero's breast,
But there's one among the number
That's quite different from the rest.
Human eyes cannot behold it
For 'tis worn upon the heart
Of a brave and gallant soldier
Who has nobly done his part.

Not alone, in deeds heroic,
In the midst of battle's din
But in kindly ministrations
To the "boys," who fought with him,
Like a tender, elder brother
This stern "Warrior with a Soul"
Led his men through many perils
Toward the far-off, longed-for goal.

And when trial and affliction
Came to test his soul, anew,
He was every inch the soldier
And to all traditions true.
And the lads who wore the "Khaki"
Loved their leader and their friend,
And they followed at his bidding,
Even to the journey's end.

"Going West," the soldiers call it,
When the Spirit wings its flight,
Thru the twilight of earth's shadows
Into sunrise fair and bright.
They'll be waiting for their leader
In that blessed "Summerland"
With their smiling words of welcome
And with many an outstretched hand.

There are many kinds of crosses
Which adorn the hero's breast;
But there's one among the number
That's quite different from the rest.
For the others rust and crumble
Into sunrise fair and bright,
But the "Cross of Love" remaineth,
Ever brighter it appears.

He who serves his Fellow-Mortals
And extends a helping hand,
To a weary, homesick soldier
In a strange and distant land,
Has obeyed the Master's teachings,
On the hills of Galilee,
"Inasmuch as ye have done it,
Ye have done it unto me."

ANNE B. WHEELER.

NC-4 BRINGS LAURELS TO AMERICAN NAVY IN 3,150-MILE RACE

ALL LISBON GREETS FLIERS

Trip Across Atlantic Made in 26 Hours and 46 Minutes of Actual Flying

probably would rest today and test the plane's engines before taking off on the last leg.

If the weather permits they will hop off for Plymouth early tomorrow, reaching the English coast in less than ten hours.

The NC-4's crew reported that the final leg of the trans-Atlantic flight from Ponta Delgada to Lisbon yesterday was practically without incident and that they expected little trouble in making the extra hop to Plymouth. The seaplane met with ideal weather nearly all the way and not once did she stray off the course routed for her by American destroyers.

Guns were booming, bells ringing and steamer whistles blowing as the NC-4 with Lieutenant-Commander Read seated in front of the cockpit darted to the water at the mouth of the Tagus River at 4:02 p. m., New York time. An instant later the flying boat had swung her nose to the left and was dashing up the harbor, through the lane of ships formed on either side. She headed straight for the Rochester, drew up alongside the cruiser and the history-making flight across the Atlantic was ended.

The last of the American destroyers which are to mark the route from Lisbon to Plymouth took up their stations last night, according to reports received here today and everything is in readiness for the flight.

NC-4 has now covered 3,150 nautical miles since she left Rockaway for Halifax on May 8 and her time for the actual cross-ocean flight from Trepassey, Newfoundland, to Lisbon is 26 hours and 46 minutes.

The best steamship time across the Atlantic is 4 days, 17 hours and 8 minutes, made by the Mauretania on February 20, 1909. It may thus be seen that the completion of the flight marks a tremendous advance in the march of progress.

There were many heartburnings among the crews of the NC-1, and NC-3 over their inability to share in the glory of making the final jump of the cross-ocean flight. Their disappointment was assuaged in some measure, however, by the fact that they had been transferred to Lisbon in time to see the completion of the great feat.

A suggestion that Commander Towers, who had been in charge of the flight until his plane NC-3 was disabled, should be permitted to accompany Lieutenant-Commander Read on the final leg of the trip, was overruled by Secretary of the Navy Daniels.

Daniels Cables Flight News to Wilson, Sends Congratulations to Read

Washington, May 28.—Immediately upon receipt of the news of the arrival of the NC-4 at Lisbon, Secretary Daniels cabled the following message to President Wilson at Paris:

"The first flight across the Atlantic has been made by the American navy and I know the fact will rejoice your heart."

Mr. Daniels followed this message with a cablegram to Commander Read which read:

"The entire navy congratulates you and your fellow-aviators on your epochal flight. The ocean has been spanned through the air and to the American navy goes the honor of making the first trans-Atlantic flight. We are all intensely proud of your achievement and thankful that it has been accomplished without mishap to any one of the daring aviators who left our shores on the first air journey to Europe. To all of them and to you all honor is due."

Record of NC-4 in World's Greatest Flight

The NC-4 left Rockaway Beach, L. I., May 8, but started from Trepassey on the actual flight across the Atlantic at 6:07 p. m. (New York time) May 16, arriving at the Azores the following day. Her official flying time is as follows:

	Nautical Miles	Land Miles	Time Hrs.	Min.
*Rockaway to Halifax	540	630	9	30
Halifax to Trepassey	460	536	6	20
Trepassey to Horta	1200	1400	15	18
Horta to Ponta Delgada	150	185	1	44
Ponta Delgada to Lisbon	800	933	9	44
Actual flying time across ocean from Trepassey to Lisbon			26	46

*Included forced landing at sea and 100-mile trip on water to Chatham, Mass.

Fastest time, Horta to Ponta Delgada, 100 miles an hour.

The Mauretania made the best record of any steamer when she crossed in 4 days, 17 hours and 6 minutes on February 20, 1909.

Navy Department Not Informed When Read Will Resume His Flight

Washington, May 28.—The Navy Department early today was without any advices to indicate when Lieutenant-Commander A. C. Read, who yesterday made history by completing the first trans-Atlantic flight, would continue from Lisbon to Plymouth, England. Read's overseas flight officially ended at the Portuguese city, but he was scheduled to continue to Plymouth as soon as conditions were favorable.

Not even some of the big developments of the war stirred the national capital more than the news of the successful termination of Read's flight. His remarkable performance of crossing the Atlantic in 26 hours and 41 minutes actual flying time thrilled alike both official and civil Washington. It was confidently expected he would be able to reach Plymouth in record time, once the start was made.

Royal Welcome Planned for Commander Read on Arrival at Plymouth

Plymouth, Eng., May 28. — The United States cruiser Stockton rode at anchor in the harbor today, ready to dash out on a minute's notice to take her staion half way between this port and Brest, when Lieutenant-Commander Read begins the last leg of his brilliant trans-Atlantic flight from Lisbon to this port in the American naval seaplane NC-4.

The Stockton came from the Azores by way of Lisbon. Her commander reported that the NC-4 is in excellent condition and that her crew are extremely confident of winding up the epoch-making air voyage in a blaze of glory.

Keen interest is felt here over the final outcome of the flight and Lieutenant-Commander Read will get a rousing greeting when he puts into the harbor.

COOLIDGE AND HOUSE CONGRATULATE READ

Congratulations from Governor Coolidge and the House of Representatives were sent today to Lieutenant-Commander Albert C. Read, a former Cape Cod boy, on the accomplishment of his flight across the Atlantic. The House unanimously passed an order, reading in part: "The House expresses its satisfaction that an American and native of this State was the first to accomplish the flight." The resolution was introduced by the Rev. Roland D. Sawyer of Ware, who stated that Read was a former member of his parish in South Hanson.

The Governor's telegram, addressed to Lieutenant-Commander Read at Lisbon, reads: "The people of Massachusetts rejoice that you are one of her sons and congratulate you on being the first to fly across the Atlantic. You have increased the fame of your native Commonwealth. Your skill and daring have again made America first. (Signed) Calvin Coolidge, Governor."

AIRMEN REACH CAPITAL RETURNING FROM BOSTON

Washington, May 28.—Lieutenant Lanborn and Sergeant Hartney have returned here by airplane from Boston, where they had flown with a poster design on a rush order by the government, placed with a Hub concern. After flying over Franklin Field in Boston for several hours testing their machine, the aviators flew to Providence, over which city they demonstrated for a half-hour. Thence they flew to Washington direct, covering the total of 440 miles in 225 minutes.

LIBERTY MOTORS SHOW WORTH, SAYS WRIGHT

Dayton, O., May 28.—"This is a great achievement," said Orville Wright today in commenting on the NC-4's flight across the ocean. "It shows," he said, "that there is nothing better in the world of aeronautics than the Liberty motor." The NC-4 is equipped with four Liberty motors.

THOUGHT READ WOULD BE A MINISTER

When Lieutenant-Commander Albert C. Read, hero of the trans-Atlantic airplane flight, went to the naval school from South Hanson, the folks down there were disappointed. They thought he was going to become a minister. He was "thin and wiry," liked books better than baseball and——

But here is the story itself by the Rev. Roland D. Sawyer, Representative in the Legislature from Ware, and who was pastor of the church at South Hanson which Read attended as a boy:

"It is a matter of deep satisfaction to every American that an American has been the first to make a trans-ocean flight through the air, but to those having the advantage of personal acquaintance with Lieutenant-Commander Read there is an added satisfaction," said Representative Sawyer.

"We know Read is that type of American that we delight to honor.

"I first knew him nineteen years ago. He was a boy in my parish at South Hanson. I was pastor of the Congregational Church there. His father was a retired minister, and personal friend. I was brought into close contact with the family.

REGULARLY AT CHURCH.

"Young Read was a regular attendant at church services. He was an earnest student in the typical Pilgrim district 'little white schoolhouse.' He was about fourteen.

"I remember him as a thin and wiry boy, rather under the average size, but apparently physically strong and self-reliant. He was dark, with black hair and black eyes. He was quiet, unassuming and interested in intellectual things. Books and religion interested him more than baseball.

"We expected he was going to become a minister. At first the community was disappointed, but when he went to the naval school we recalled the brilliant career of his uncle, Rear-Admiral Albert C. Barker, for whom the boy was named. Some of the community who had observed this boy predicted for him a career equal to that of his distinguished uncle.

"Barker is a Plymouth County name. The folks in South Hanson thought that he got his characteristics of brilliancy from his mother's side. I know that every man, woman and child in the county honors him.

HONORED HIS FAMILY.

"I best remember Read as a boy who honored his father and mother and quietly demonstrated his kindliness to an older and invalid brother. Read kept closer to the domestic circles than most boys, partly owing to his natural affection for his parents and partly to his extremely kind care of the brother. It is barely possible that those things kept him away from boys' sports as much as his love for books.

"I recall also that young Read was fond of mechanics. He was of an inquiring 'turn of mind.' He seemed to find as much satisfaction in working alone over some boyish mechanical device as some other boy in the sports.

"John Barker, another uncle, was also in the Civil War, and on every Memorial Day young Read was one of the most active of the school pupils who in various ways participated in the exercises on the town common. He marched with the veterans and invariably carried a wreath to John Barker's grave.

"Young Read, by environment, training and natural bent, was a typical American boy."

Hawker's Ill-Fated Plane Picked Up by U. S. Vessel

St. John's, N. F., May [illegible]—Harry Hawker's Sopwith biplane, in which he and McKenzie Grieve attempted to bridge the Atlantic, has been picked up several miles from where he was forced down by the American ship Charlottville, according to a wireless message received by the Furness liner Lachem and relayed to this port.

The point at which the ill-fated craft was picked up is given as latitude 49.40 north, longitude 29.08 west.

KING DECORATES HAWKER AND GRIEVE

By EARLE C. REEVES, International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, May 28.—While a great cheering crowd stood outside Buckingham Palace, King George today decorated Harry G. Hawker and Mackenzie Grieve, his navigator, with the Air Force Cross, thus inaugurating the new insignia which is to be awarded only to airmen specially distinguishing themselves for bravery.

From the palace Hawker and Grieve rode through streets lined with cheering thousands en route to a luncheon given in their honor by the Daily Mail, which promoted the trans-Atlantic competition. Major-General Seely, on behalf of the newspaper, bestowed a $25,000 consolation prize on the two men who were rescued from mid-Atlantic after an unsuccessful attempt to fly to Ireland.

The luncheon was attended by officers of the air ministry and prominent government officials, who gave Hawker and Grieve a warm welcome when they entered the room. Hawker responded in a few words to laudatory speeches. He referred to the success of the American fliers in crossing the Atlantic and said that with a little more luck his Sopwith plane would have put the British flag across first.

A series of receptions and celebrations, including one at the Sopwith Aeroplane Company plant, followed the luncheon. Crowds gathered about the automobiles conveying the aviators and at some places the police had to make way for them. In all the demonstrations Australian soldiers played a big part.

Hawker has declined several offers to appear in vaudeville and probably will also reject bids from cinema companies, it was said today. He will confer with officials of the Sopwith Company and visit the Brooklands aerodrome tomorrow before making a definite announcement as to whether or not he will make another attempt to cross the Atlantic. His friends said today they had gained the impression that the Australian pilot would not again attempt the flight. They said he expressed confidence that he would succeed on a second attempt but the fact that the Americans already had crossed the Atlantic made him less eager to make the try.

A big basket full of congratulatory messages were awaiting Hawker last night, after he finally eluded the huge crowds that acclaimed him. Many of these came from America and nearly every country on the globe was represented.

Swampscott Woman Dies Before Dawn, As She Predicted

"I have a premonition that the end is near. I will be dead before morning." Miss Ida D. Raymond, twenty-six, told her family. She died before dawn at the home of her sister, Mrs. Annie Murray, No. 57 Crescent avenue, Swampscott.

She had been ill about a month.

The body was sent to her old home, Lake George, Yarmouth County, N. S., and buried beside that of her mother, as she had requested.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 28.—Concluding his first flight, Warner Jennet, a Belgian, jumped off an airplane driven by Eddie C. The descent was made in 58 seconds, the landing being made within sixty-eight paces of the spot over which the release was made.

BANANA PRICES DENOUNCED BY FITZGERALD

Men Controlling Industry Out for All Public Will Stand, Says Fitzgerald

Washington, May 28.—"The men controlling the banana industry are going to get everything the public will stand," said Representative John F. Fitzgerald of Massachusetts during a debate on the Agricultural bill.

Representative Fitzgerald bitterly denounced the high cost of bananas, declaring that they were the one fruit that was plentiful.

"The other day I called on the representative of a steamship company that controls the banana industry in the United States," he said. "Reports from Jamaica and the West Indies show that there is a tremendous abundance. I waited on the representative of this company and called his attention to these facts. I said: 'There is a prohibitive price on all fruit, and the banana is the one fruit which, I understand, is abundant. Why do you charge $6.50 a hundred as against $1.50 or $2 a few years ago, thereby compelling bananas to be sold at retail at 50 to 60 cents a dozen as against 15 to 20 cents formerly?'

"'Well,' he said, 'you know how labor has increased and you know the wages of the men employed on these boats have increased and you know the increase in the price of coal.'

"I said, 'Yes, I know all those things,' and I said: 'Mr. Field, the records of your corporation published show that you are making $40 a share on $100 capitalization and that is an exorbitant and unconscionable profit for your corporation to make, and if you had a regard for the times and conditions of civilization as they exist in Europe today you would be willing to meet the situation and get a reasonable profit, and if you got a reasonable profit you would sell those bananas for $2.50 or $3 and they could retail at 30 cents a dozen, and you could bring untold bananas and fruit to every home in the land.'

"He said, 'We are going to get what the market gives us.'

"In other words, they were going to get everything the public would stand," continued Mr. Fitzgerald.

Camp Devens, May 28.—Enlistments for the regular army at this cantonment to date total 510, and for the entire country approximately 45,000, Captain John C. Macdonald, recruiting officer, reported today.

Recruits were volunteering so fast, he said, for the cavalry, A. E. F., it was necessary to close this branch of the service for the time being. Captain Macdonald said enlistments for the cavalry for service in this country were still being made daily.

Excellent work has been accomplished by recruiting parties at Lowell, Lawrence and Haverhill. Many recruits are selecting service for Hawaii, China, Philippines, Canal Zone, Alaska and France. Many may volunteer also for Siberia.

FEARS HE IS AN "ENOCH ARDEN"

Schofield of Royal Engineers Back from France Seeks Missing Wife

Is he a twentieth century Enoch Arden? That is what Driver Harry Schofield of the Royal Engineers, just returned from fifteen months in France, wants to know.

Where Mrs. Nellie Hawthorne Schofield is, he doesn't know—and would like to. They parted on bad terms, he declares.

Now Schofield has asked the American to help him. They were both born in Manchester, England, and were married in Mattapan in 1912. Three years later there was trouble over a neighbor, and Nellie disappeared from her home, according to Schofield. The Schofields' home at River street and Wood avenue was broken up and Harry enlisted. He is one of five brothers in the English army.

"Of course there are plenty of other girls," he said. "But if she should be sorry she left me and want to come back, I shouldn't want to be mean to her." His first thought on returning from the war was to locate his missing wife. Anyone knowing where Mrs. Schofield is may communicate with Driver Harry Schofield in care of the Boston American.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX DYING IN ENGLAND

Famous Poetess Stricken After War Service in Hospitals of France

Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox, "poetess of passion," as she has so often been called, is dying in England, according to dispatches received by her friends in this country. A cable summoning them to her bedside says: "Condition very critical. Friends leave New York by first steamer."

Mrs. Wilcox has been ill for about two months, though she has completed a series of poems since she took to her bed. She went to France some time ago to work among the soldiers and achieved wonderful results in hospitals and canteens.

Mrs. Wilcox began to write when she was a young girl, back in Johnston Centre, Wis., where she was born. Later she became a contributor to all of the Hearst publications and magazines, and thus her name became a household word, throughout this country, and England as well.

Since the death of her husband, Robert M. Wilcox, a few years ago, Mrs. Wilcox has journeyed extensively in the psychic field of literature.

Mrs. Wilcox's Summer home is The Bungalow, Granite Bay, Short Beach, Conn.

ADOPTS STONE'S ORDER IN JEWS' BEHALF

State House of Representatives Asks U. S. Government to Stop Polish Pogroms

The Massachusetts House of Representatives today unanimously adopted an order expressing protest against the cruelties inflicted upon the Jews in Poland. The order was introduced by Representative Elihu D. Stone of Dorchester, a member of the committee of arrangements for the general protest of Jewish workingmen in this State, staged for today. It was adopted without debate, reading as follows:

"Ordered, that the Massachusetts House of Represntatives hereby express its abhorrence of the cruelties now being inflicted upon the Jews in Poland, and urge the government of the United States to take such steps as may be necessary to insure the life and liberty of the Jewish inhabitants of the newly created Poland, a country which owes its existence as a free and independent State to the allies and to the United States, in whose armies the Jewish people have contributed their full share of service and sacrifice, and that it is the hope and expectation of the House of Represntatives of Massachusetts that Poland, which has suffered greatly from oppression, shall not herself become an oppressor. And be it further

"Ordered that the clerk of the House of Representatives be directed to send to the President of the United States, to the Secretary of State of the United States, and to the Senators and Representatives in Congress from this Commonwealth, a copy of this order."

HELD ON CHARGE OF LOOTING DRUG STORE

On charges of breaking and entering a drug store in Brighton, John Mackie, forty-nine, appeared today in the Brighton Police Court before Judge Connolly and was held in $2,000 for a hearing on June 4. Mackie lives on Cambridge street, Brighton. The store was entered between Monday night and Tuesday morning and about $300 worth of goods taken. Three others were arrested following a mix-up in which, the police say, Mackie was being beaten. He was charged with drunkenness. In Mackie's pockets, the police claim, drug store articles were found. Two hundred dollars' worth of the goods were later recovered in a vacant lot. Two of the others held were later released. The third, James F. Carroll of Cypress street, Brookline, was charged with theft of seven dollars from Mackie. He pleaded not guilty and was held in $2,000 for a hearing June 4.

It was further reported that the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration had sent a request to H. B. Thayer of New York, president of the Western Electric Company, asking him to come to Boston in the hope of effecting a settlement of the difficulty. The strike has been indorsed by the executive board of the Boston Central Labor Union.

GERMANS, FEARING MORE WAR, APPEAL TO SWISS

Geneva, May 28.—Hundreds of terrorized German families are seeking admission into Switzerland, fearing bombardment of German cities by allied airmen in the event the German envoys refuse to sign the peace treaty. It is reported the allies are building aerodromes at many points. These refugees are bitter against Berlin. They declare they have suffered enough from war and all they want now is peace.

GERMANY DEMANDS GEN. GERARD'S RECALL

Berlin, May 27.—Mathias Erzberger, head of the German armistice commission, has sent a note to the Allies, demanding the immediate recall of General Gerard, in command of the French troops in the Palatinate. Governor-President von Winterstein sent a note to Erzberger, accusing Gerard of deporting German citizens from the region and of flagrant violation of the principle of self-determination.

3,000,000 Jews in Peril in Poland

By REPRESENTATIVE ELIHU D. STONE.

A new bloody chapter has been added to the tragic history of the Jewish people by modern Poland. A people that was greatly oppressed has become herself an oppressor. History will forever recall the fact that the liberty of new Poland was baptized in Jewish blood.

Citing the sacrifices that the Jewish youth has made on the battlefields of France, the local Jewish leader depicts three million of his people faced with disaster and ruin. Thousands are being slaughtered, he says, through the Anti-Semitic propaganda being conducted by the Polish intellectuals.

Representative Stone's article follows:

A new bloody chapter has been added to the tragic history of the Jewish people by modern Poland. A people that was greatly oppressed has become herself an oppressor. History will forever recall the fact that the liberty of new Poland was baptized in Jewish blood.

Thousands of Jewish children are being rendered fatherless, and thousands of Jewish mothers are being rendered childless by reason of the atrocities exercised by the Polish soldiers upon a defenceless people.

Paderewski failed to preserve the harmony of his soul and his music will forever remain marred by the acts of his government towards the ancient people of Israel.

APPEALS TO AMERICA.

I do not address myself to the Polish government; I refuse to enter into any discussion with a government whose hand is stained with blood. I speak to the Allies; my voice calls to America. Both the Allies and America are morally responsible for the acts of Poland, the child of their adoption, and it is America and the Allies who must, and shall stop the massacres of the Jewish people of Poland.

The Jews of America have made the supreme sacrifice in this war and have cheerfully sent their children to the field of battle for the purpose of extending American ideals of freedom and liberty, to all children of men including both the Jews and the Poles. The thousands of graves of Jewish soldiers which decorate the battlefields of France and Poland constitute a vivid testimonial to the Maccabean valor and self-sacrifice displayed by the Jewish people.

The flesh and gore of the Jewish youth that fell in battle has fertilized the soil of Poland and contributed a great deal towards the establishment of an independent and free Poland. That massacres will be the reward of Poland to the Jews was something that the Devil himself could not have conceived.

I appeal to America, who is today the greatest moral force in the world, to exercise its great influence in behalf of a people who are face to face with all kinds of dangers in Poland, and recognition of the present Polish government must be withdrawn unless it is ready to give concrete application to the American ideals of democracy.

RUIN FACES MILLIONS.

It is indeed deplorable that conditions made it imperative for the Jewish people to raise a voice of protest against the Polish government; the massacres are the result of a policy pursued by the Polish ruling class for the last decade. And terrible indeed are the results.

Never in the martyr history of the Jewish people has a larger section of it been in so dangerous a position as the Jews are at the present time in Poland. Three million Jews in that country are at this moment face to face to face with any possible calamity, ranging from economic ruin to deliberate massacre.

Poland, whose old dream has now become a reality and whose people now enter upon the happiest development in their history, and are receiving the support and blessings of the world, constitute so dreadful a menace to so large a minority of its population—a minority which has contributed to its cultural, political and material progress of Poland.

JEW HATERS IN CONTROL.

At the present time the outstanding feature in the physiognomy of Polish social and political life is anti-Semitism. Hatred of the Jew has embraced every section of the Polish population; a hatred which is expressing itself in the ugliest forms that anti-Semitism has ever assumed; a hatred which is menacing the very lives of three million Jews.

Thousands of Jews are being slaughtered in Poland. The atrocities committed in the city of Pinsk, where fifty-three Jewish relief workers assembled at a meeting were deliberately killed by the Polish soldiers under the pretense of fighting Bolshevism, is indeed the most tragic and shameful chapter in the history of modern Poland.

In Russia, under the Czars the most encouraging phenomenom in Russian life was the fact that the Russian intellectuals have always decried and combatted anti-Semitism. In Poland, however, it is the Polish intellectuals who are the vanguard in the anti-Semitic movement, to the profound disappointment of a man like George Barnes, who has so glowingly praised the Polish people and whose cause he so effectively espoused.

The present Polish rulers and officials may be said to be without exception anti-semites. Anton Dmovsky, the principal Polish representative at Paris, has boasted of the fact that he was the chief instigator of the Polish economic boycott against the Jews in Russian Poland. Every Polish political party beginning with the largest and most influential, the National Democrats, down to the Polish Socialist Party, make anti-Semitism a part of their platform.

"WIPE OUT THE JEW."

Thus, the cry, "Wipe out the Jew" initiated in 1912 at the time when the economic boycott against the Jews was organized in Poland, is the dominant factor of the Poland of today. It is evident from the conduct of the Polish government that it is its purpose to create such conditions for the Jews in Poland as will kill as many of them as possible and force the rest to emigrate.

The Poles speak openly in their press and in their agitation of a struggle against the Jewish people until not a remnant of them shall be left, and they take every opportunity to realize this aim. During the war as a result of Polish calumnies, thousands of innocent Jews were shot on a charge of treason while the Poles possessed themselves of their property. At the present time "Pogroms" carried through by the Poles are in line with the same policy of exterminating the Jew.

All these atrocities and crimes are committed against the three million Jews who settled in Poland, even before the Polish kingdom was founded, and who made Poland rich, and who have supported its literature, its press and its culture. Before the eyes of the world at a time when the trend of world politics seems to favor the wildest dreams of Polish expansion, Poland, instead of becoming safe for democracy has become a safe place for the slaughter of the children of Israel. The Jews of the world must rely upon American opinion to deliver their brethern in Poland from the menace in which they find themselves in Poland. The American people who have contributed so much for the freedom of Poland must not permit the new Poland to become a new centre of human oppression.

INDUSTRIES FOR EDUCATION OF ALIENS

Americanization Conference Speakers Say It Will Solve Labor Problems

That the Americanization of the foreign laborer is to do much in the solving of the labor problems of this country, and that aliens who become American citizens become more productive and of more general value to their employers, was the concensus of opinions expressed at the Americanization conference held today in the auditorium of the State House by the Massachusetts Bureau of Immigration and the Massachusetts Extension Department of the State Board of Education.

The general topic for all speakers was that of the problem of education, divided into sub topics. Results of actual experimental classes were given from Cambridge, from the American Optical Company of Southbridge and from the Y. M. C. A. classes of Worcester.

GOVERNOR SPEAKS.

Bernard J. Rothwell, chairman of the Bureau of Immigration, opened the conference with a brief address, responded to by Governor Coolidge. Other speakers were Charles F. Towne, State director of immigrant education, whose topic was "The Federal Program"; George F. Quimby of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, on "Securing the Interests of Industry"; Michael E. Fitzgerald, superintendent of schools in Cambridge; Glenn O. Pierrel of the Worcester Y. M. C. A., who described the Americanization classes there, and Royal Parkinson of the American Optical Company.

Mr. Quimby said: "The manufacturers in this country welcome most heartily the education of the immigrant, as it is going to solve 75 per cent. of the labor troubles."

CLASSES ARE PAID.

Superintendent Fitzgerald told of the experiment in the American Rubber Company of Cambridge. He said:

"Our experiment in Cambridge of the American Rubber Company has been most happy. The company supplied the schoolrooms, desks, pictures and other equipment and the city of Cambridge supplied the all-day teacher.

"One very important factor in the work of the teacher of aliens is to move about the factory and know the help. In this factory 150 pupils joined these classes voluntarily. They were not told by the employers that there were to be paid, but at the end of two weeks the employes found themselves paid for learning to be Americans.

"'How much did this cost you in extra help?' I was asked. 'Not an extra penny. They did more work and they went about it singing,' was the reply."

WOULD PURGE 'L' OF ALIEN SLACKERS

Commander of Spanish War Veterans Demands This Before Pay Is Raised Again

Accusing certain Elevated employes of being aliens and service dodgers, Department Commander Timothy W. Kelly, United Spanish War Veterans, today in an open letter to Governor Coolidge opposed granting salary increases to them at this time.

Mr. Kelly commented on the fact that the road had significantly announced a further rise in fares, and declared that there should be a cleaning out of undesirables from the rolls of the company before "any more of the American people's money is taken from their pockets."

The letter is as follows:

May 27, 1919.

Hon. Calvin Coolidge, Governor.
State House, Boston, Mass.

Your Excellency: For the past ten days there has appeared in the newspapers of Boston reading matter stating that the Boston Elevated employes are seeking another increase in salary and that the matter has been taken under consideration by the board of trustees, over whom you have control. It seems peculiar that just as soon as the trustees announce that they have taken this salary-increase question under consideration they announce to the public that the fare on the Elevated will be 9 cents or 10 cents a ride for each passenger by July 1.

Within a month the policemen and firemen of Boston used as their argument for an increase in salary that the porters who do the cleaning around the Elevated stations were receiving higher salary than they. If this is true and the salary is so good, and they are now asking more, it is time for the public to look the situation over. Personally, I am in favor of increases in salary under certain conditions, but the condition to which I object in the Elevated demand is this:

"About the time the draft law went into effect the Elevated posted notices where its employes congregated instructing and advising them how to claim exemption and so avoid military service. I understand a number of men availed themselves of this information and advice. I have also heard it said that prior to the war from 30 per cent. to 50 per cent. of the Elevated employes were aliens or non-citizens of this Commonwealth. We all know that when the British and Canadian draft laws were going into effect that hundreds of Elevated employes took out citizenship papers in order to avoid a call to arms from their native land. There are, I am informed, a number of other aliens employed by the Elevated who are not affected by the draft laws.

"I believe that before any more of the American people's money is taken from their pockets for the men employed by the Elevated that there should be a cleaning-out of every alien, conscientious objector or other service dodger that has been drawing about $30 a week while our men were fighting for us and drawing $30 a month.

"Very truly yours,
"TIMOTHY W. KELLY,
"Department Commander."

BOSTON $66,000 SHY, BUT N. E. GOES OVER

General Cole Making Personal Canvass Today for Salvation Army Funds

In the Salvation Army Fund drive which closes tomorrow at midnight Brigadier-General Charles H. Cole, chairman of the Boston committee, predicts that the little old Hub will sail over the top when all is said and done—and YOU have contributed. New England is "over the top," so boom it up, Boston!

Boston was about $66,000 shy of her $400,000 quota at noon today.

Brigadier-General Cole left campaign headquarters in the basement of the National Shawmut Bank building and started on the run in a personal, heart-to-heart canvass of tardy business men in the down town section. "Boston will go over, I am sure, but it will be a hard, stiff fight to get that $66,000 in the next thirty-six hours," said General Cole.

Alfred L. Aiken, local president of the campaign, today reported $9,592 as yesterday's contributions. The largest contributor was Thomas G. Plant, who previously gave $5,000 and offered an additional $5,000 if nineteen others contributed $5,000 each. The nineteen did not contribute, so as a compromise in generosity Mr. Plant today gave an additional $1,666.66.

THREE "BLACK SPOTS."

Up to noon today the only "black spots" in New England outside of Boston were Worcester and Lynn, but officials said that New England would "go over" handsomely. Revere "went over" with $3,650. Pittsfield contributed $7,500, although that city's quota was $6,000. North Adams has collected $6,500 of its $7,500 quota and is still going, with promise of going over the top.

Concord, N. H., is the proud possessor of her $10,000 allotment and is still "on the job." Franklin also has attained its ideal, as has Laconia. Newport, R. I., has already secured $12,000, which leaves that city only $2,000 behind.

LOWELL $3,000 SHORT.

Lowell has contributed $30,000, and is $3,000 below quota, but will go over the top. Lawrence has only $20,000 of a $35,000 quota, but reports optimistically. Haverhill has made good $31,000 of her $38,000.

Newburyport, whose quota was $6,000, has already subscribed $13,000.

URGES QUICK ACTION ON SOLDIERS' FARM MEASURE

Washington, D. C., May 28.—Republican leader Mondell urged on the House Public Lands Committee early action on the soldiers' settlement bill, which appropriates $500,000,000 for reclaiming, clearing and irrigating public lands in various States for settlement by returning soldiers and sailors under ownership to be obtained through easy instalment payments.

Secretary of the Interior Lane will be heard today in advocacy of the bill, which has the support of Senate and House leaders of both political parties. Mr. Mondell asked for a favorable report from the committees by the end of the week and promised to rush the bill through the House.

GOOD ROADS FOR AUTO TRIP OF 131 MILES

One hundred and thirty-one miles of good roads which pass through some of the most interesting cities and towns in Massachusetts are provided in the Sunday trip prepared this week for the Boston American by the Touring Bureau of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company. The trip is 131 miles in length and offers the tourist an opportunity to stop for dinner at either Worcester or Providence, or at one of the many motor inns scattered along the route.

This trip is especially attractive because of the excellent condition of the roads, the entire itinerary being over extra good macadam, with the exception of about five miles of concrete at Northbridge, between Worcester and Providence. The detailed route is:

SALESMAN WITH AUTO REPLACES 'DRUMMER'

The days of the old-fashioned "drummer" are numbered. In his place his arisen the motoring salesman who covers his territory in an automobile.

"For the motor car has offered traveling men a better means of transportation," says W. H. Gleason of the Utterback-Gleason Company, distributor for Dort Motor Cars. "This is especially true of the salesman who makes the small rural communities. These travelers have generally had a rather small community to cover—small because of the transportation difficulties. They have made their trips, in a large number of cases, during the week, returning to some larger place for Sunday.

"Now they can make the same territory and more by motor car. Not only is it possible to short-cut with an automobile, making jumps that had to be covered by a longer route on the train, but the traveler can save many hours that formerly were wasted waiting for the one train that ran daily. The motoring salesman gets into a town, sees his customers and then speeds away without wasting a minute.

ASK MR. FIXIT

Mr. Fixit will answer in this column on Wednesdays all queries pertaining to automobile matters but cannot undertake to reply by letter to questions and it is requested that persons not send stamps. The name and address must accompany each question.

Dear Sir—Will you tell me how to line up the wheels of an automobile to make sure that the front tires are tracking?
G. M. F., Boston.

Take a piece of string longer than you car and attach it to one of the spokes of your rear wheel. Then run the string forward bringing it over the rear tire opposite the hub, let it just touch the edge of the rear side of the front tire and just touch the front tire again on its front side. Work your front wheels back and forth until you have these three points directly in line. Then try the other side of the car and if your front wheels are out the string will show it. You can then adjust them by taking up on the steering rod. Your front wheels should toe in about a quarter of an inch.

Mr. Fixit—Does the exhaust valve on an automobile open just at the end of the explosion stroke of the piston or after the piston is on the way up again?
V. S., Portland, Me.

It opens before the piston reaches the end of the explosion stroke. This may possibly waste a little of the force of the explosion but it is made up by the freedom of the piston in beginning the exhaust stroke. If the valve were kept closed until the very end of the explosion stroke, the piston, in coming up to the exhaust stroke would be impeded by the force which drove it down. Normally the exhaust valve opens when the piston has completed about seven eights of the explosion stroke.

My Dear Mr. Fixit—I find that when my engine is hot and I stop it I have trouble in starting it again. Even with the choker it starts hard. What about it?
A. G. M., Topsfield.

Your car should start easier when hot. You must not use the choker when the engine is hot, however, as it is unnecessary and moreover you are likely to get too rich mixture. Look at your spark plugs and see if they are carbonized. Try to start without the choker.

Dear Mr. Fixit—The Holley carbureter on my Ford leaks. Can you help me?
P. W., Quincy.

This might be caused by one of three things: sediment has got into the needle valve seat, which prevents it from closing; the needle or the seat have been damaged, or the fuel level in the carbureter is too high. In the first two cases clean out the carbureter, pipe and tank and examine the end of the needle valve and the seat. If the fuel level is too high remove the float chamber and bend up the lever.

Dear Sir—Can you give me the address of the manufacturers of the Eisemann magneto?
R. J. W., Malden.

The Eisemann Magneto Company, Bush Terminal, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mr. Fixit—What is it that one should deduce from the different colors of the smoke from the exhaust of a motor? E. S. M., Boston.

Black smoke indicates too rich a mixture. Frequently you can smell raw gasoline in an exhaust of this kind. Blue smoke indicates too much oil in the crank case some of which is being burned.

My Dear Mr. Fixit — How can I prevent grease from working through from my differential into the brakes and what causes it?
J. S. P., Lynn.

Probably the felt washer placed in the rear housing of your car to prevent this condition has become worn out. You will have to put in a new one and I should advise your not trying to do it yourself. If you do, wash the brake linings with gasoline before putting back.

BOSTON BUILDING OPERATIONS NOW TAKE ON NEW LIFE

Boston building has almost doubled for the first four months of this year as compared with the corresponding four months of 1918, according to Charles Stanhope Damrell, actuary and statistician of the Boston Building Department, with which he has been connected almost all his life.

"Build Now," says Mr. Damrell, in praising the American's BUILD NOW campaign. "Boston is beginning to build on a large scale and those who don't BUILD NOW will be left out in the cold."

In the first four months of 1918, building operations in Boston aggregated $2,707,020, while for the first four months of the present year the total was $4,406,411. There were 252 building operations in Boston in January this year, 297 in February, 488 in March, and 550 last month, showing a progressive increase. Other figures indicate a general building boom here in the near future.

"What can you tell readers of the American relative to the building situation in Boston and particularly in relation to the BUILD NOW drive?" Mr. Damrell was asked.

DEPRESSION IS OVER.

"Reviewing the building situation today, I conclude that the conditions which tended to depress building operations since the actual entry of the United States into the world war, have changed and building activities have taken on a new life," he said. "This conclusion is drawn from the daily records from all over the country and locally from the records of the building department. The conclusions drawn from the department records are most encouraging and convincing.

"In comparing the character of buildings, their area, height and estimated cost for which applications have been filed, with those for which applications were filed for a corresponding period of last year, one finds a marked percentage of gain for the current year, viz: 56 per cent. plus in the number of operations and 75 per cent. plus in the estimated cost of same. This statement is more clearly set out in detail by the figures I have quoted which indicate to me beyond all doubt that we are on the verge of great building activity. These figures seem to me to be strong, plain and reasonable evidence of the beginning and the the assured continuance of stable and prosperous building conditions.

EXPECTS HIGHER COSTS.

"Neither high prices of material nor increased cost of labor would prevent a substantial building year, if banks, trust companies and mortgage lending institutions would make money for building operations reasonably available. The consensus of expert opinion seems to be that the cost of construction will not decrease and that the demand for new construction here in this country and reconstruction abroad will increase it and bring it to a new high level that will doubtless continue for several years.

"When peace is fully achieved and the nation resumes its great industrial progress, building construction, the product of men's toil by hand and brain, will take its place as one of the world's greatest industries and prosperity will follow in its wake. Steadily and irresistibly, the gold wealth of the United States is being inflated, owing to the tremendous gold imports of the country during the past three years.

"I have been told that our gold supply has increased more than 33 per cent. since the war began in 1914. Prices are very largely influenced by this fact, however remote it may seem to some. An old but trite saying, 'the pendulum will swing back as far as it swings out,' explains my belief in the return of prosperity in building activities. The limit in building depression in Boston (outside of governmental and war construction work) reached its lowest point in 1918, and was markedly so during the time the United States government put a ban on all building operations not essential to war work.

"As secretary to the Board on Non-War Construction for the city of Boston, I had an excellent opportunity to observe these conditions.

"Following the removal of all the restrictions against building construction made by the Federal authorities, the coloring of the sky of hope grew more brilliant and radiant as actualities succeeded hope until today we see steady advance in the building line toward a sure and continued prosperity. Like the snowball the youth pushes along gathering in size each turn or revolution it makes until it grows to the full size of his desires, so will building construction once started with the impetus of the people behind it grow to the full expectation and desires of all.

COMPARES WAR CONDITIONS.

"Let us restrospect a little and make a brief comparison of conditions following the Civil War with conditions today. During our Civil War and the world war about to close, prices of commodities in general rose steadily, but in neither war did building material rise as high in price as other commodities. At the end of the Civil War in 1865, prices broke suddenly and violently. Beginning with 1866, prices dropped slowly until 1878, when the pre-war level was reached. Building material, however, remained higher than all commodities until 1875.

"During this reconstruction period the currency was on a distinctly unsound basis. Sharp fluctuations in prices, speculations and over expansion of business led to the financial panic of 1873. Yet this panic was not accompanied by sharp decline in prices. So thirteen years after the war, prices, as I have stated, returned to pre-war level. The abundant opportunity then existing for the development of new and more economic methods of production, by new forms of machinery and new kinds of business organization led to the return of pre-war level prices. While these opportunities do not exist today in as great a degree as in those days, yet exceedingly more favorable conditions, generally speaking, do exist and we are thus encouraged to push ahead and gain the goal we seek, ever remembering that 'time and opportunity wait for no man.'

"In compiling the returns in January, 1919, for 152 cities, it is ascertained that 83 cities, including Boston, show a gain over the figures of January, 1918, while the same cities in April of this year, 123 show a gain. Heavy gains were made in Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Indianapolis, New York city and Philadelphia.

HOUGHTON'S TIRE STOCK INCLUDES ALL BRANDS

Appreciating the trend of business and the rapid growth of the automobile accessory business, the Houghton & Dutton Company has had the foresight to install a tire department in its store. This department carries a large line of well-known makes of all sizes, and also a full line of tubes and all accessories.

The Pemberton square entrance makes is especially convenient for customers, as it is permissable to park cars in Pemberton square, and the store is convenient to tubes and trolleys.

SPRINGS ABSENT IN WEBBER CARBURETOR

One of the features of the Webber Carburetor is the automatic adjustment depending upon no springs. The carburetor adjusts itself to climatic conditions, and the makers claim that it works as well on the mountain tops as at lower levels and this condition is brought about by the automatic adjustment which is governed by the suction created in the cylinders. The suction governs the amount of gas admitted to the intake.

For instance, when going up a hill and the throttle is wide open, under ordinary conditions a point would be reached where the engine might labor and get too much gas. With the Webber, even if the throttle is wide open, the suction of the pistons admit only so much gas and keeps the mixture right.

PROMISES BIG SUPPLY OF MAIBOHM CARS FOR N. E.

O. L. Curtis of the Maibohm factory was in town this week and expressed himself as much pleased with the manner in which the Mann Motor Car Company was handling the Maibohm Six. Mr. Curtis wanted to look this territory over, and after a thorough inspection decided that the Boston and New England territory was very important and promised that it would be supplied with cars.

BROOKFIELD MOTOR TRAP "COP" LEADS AUTOISTS ON

Motorists are warned to look out for a motorcyclist in the vicinity of Brookfield. This lone rider looks like the average motorcycle fan, except that he has a tell-tale speedometer on the handlebars that looks official —and it probably would go with any judge.

This individual delights to ride alongside a car, keeping accurate pace with the vehicle, but offering every inducement for a race. He will even trail along for miles beside one car of a party and if he is unsuccessful in inducing the owner to let her out will drop back to others in the party and try to induce them to speed a little.

It seems to be his usual Sunday sport and undoubtedly proves lucrative when he catches the unwary motorist.

DR. WESSELHOEFT, HERO, TO BECOME A BENEDICT

Dr. Conrad Wesselhoeft, recently awarded the distinguished service cross on Boston Common by Major-General Edwards, with Miss Frances G. Kittredge, his fiancee, has filed notice of intention of marriage at the City Registry. He gave his age as thirty-five and Miss Kittredge's as thirty-one. Her home is with her parents, No. 3 Hilliard street, Cambridge.

"Efficiency." It's Yours—

For the past two years the time, work and energy of our whole organization has been devoted to government work.
The efficiency of the organization won one government contract of over $1,000,000—this same "efficiency" that did such splendid work for "Uncle Sam," is now awaiting a call from you.

BANK INTEREST BILL BEFORE SENATE AGAIN

Opposition, Led by Swig, Wants Measure Submitted to People

Under suspension of the rules the Senate admitted for further consideration the bill recently passed prohibiting trust companies from paying interest on savings oftener than once in six months. The bill was readmitted upon the petition of Representative Bliss of Malden, the Senate acting in concurrence with the House in bringing the measure up for further consideration.

Considerable opposition to the measure has been created since its passage, and Simon Swig, vice-president of the Tremont Trust Company, and others have petitioned that the law be submitted to the people under the initiative and referendum amendment before it should become operative.

The contention of the petitioners is that the bill was passed by the Legislature under a misleading title and that it is unjust to forbid banking institutions from paying interest upon deposits withdrawn within six months.

The title of the bill was "to authorize savings banks, institutions for savings, and trust companies to place deposits on interest monthly," whereas it explicitly forbids the paying of interest for periods less than six months.

The measure is now before the joint committee on banks and banking and hearings will be arranged within a short time.

Lampoon Won and So Did Crimson--Each Admits It

Either the Harvard Lampoon or Harvard Crimson is prepared to pay a good reward to a mathematician who can successfully prove that their respective baseball teams won the annual championship contest.

The Lampoon figured its score book out, and stuck out a victorious chest.

But the Crimson score minder agreed to disagree, and instead of an 8 to 9 victory for Lampy, conjured up a 12 to 0 defeat.

Neutral correspondents covering the sector report the battle a draw.

BOGUS COINS FOUND IN CLINTON BANK DEPOSITS

Clinton, May 28.—Officials of the First National Bank have reported to the police department the presence in deposits of a number of counterfeit half dollars. They are not markedly light in weight and their "ring" is not bad but they are considerably darker in color than the usual United States coinage. Officials believe that some of the money made by the gang of counterfeiters recently rounded up at Gardner may have made its way here.

LEGION POSTS FORMING ALL OVER STATE

Colonel Herbert to Call Meeting This Week for Final Plans of Organizing

By SGT. MAJ. G. F. GILBODY.

With more than eighteen posts already organized and many others well under way throughout the State, interest in the American Legion, composed of veterans of the World War, is spreading rapidly.

Plans for the formation of a post in Boston, to be known as the McConnell Post, are being considered by William J. Blake, the former Harvard athlete and a lieutenant in "Boston's Own" 101st Infantry, during the participation of American troops in the war.

At the present time plans for the organization in Massachusetts are still in the air, pending the receipt by Colonel John F. J. Herbert of Worcester, Chairman of Massachusetts, of the necessary literature from the temporary headquarters of the Legion in New York.

CALL ST. LOUIS DELEGATION.

Last week Colonel Herbert attended a meeting of the National Executive Committee of the Legion in New York and talked over matters with the Executive Committee members from the other States. The outcome of the meeting has not as yet been announced by Colonel Herbert, but it is expected that the latter part of this week a meeing of the delegates who attended the St. Louis caucus of the Legion, and others interested in it, will be called in Worcester by Col. Herbert.

At this meeting a definite plan of organization will be agreed upon and other matters relative to the establishment of posts in the State will be settled.

Practically every suburb of the city has a post in the Legion already. Walter Mullen, chairman of the Ward 18 Draft Board of Dorchester, has called a meeting of the soldiers, sailors and marines in that ward to be held the first week in June for the purpose of forming a post.

BROOKLINE ORGANIZES.

Through the activities of Lieutenant George C. Cutler of the Navy, who attended the St. Louis caucus, a post has been established in Brookline with Sergeant Benjamin James, commander; General John H. Sherburne, now Mr. Sherburne, by his own request at the meeting, vice commander; James V. Kelley, adjutant; George R. Roberts, finance officer; Paul C. Jouannet, historian; Chester Butts, Blake Cooley, Erland Fish, Thomas F. Moran, Payson Dana, John O'Neil, Ray Kennealy, Louis deB. Lovett and George W. Provost, executive committee.

In the Charlestown section a meeting was held to form a post and was addressed by Edward F. Dalton and Regular Sergeant-Major Leo Spillane. Captain John P. Buckley and Sergeant-Major Paul H. Keating served as chairman and secretary, pro tem, respectively.

Several posts are being formed in Lynn and also in Haverhill, where Neil P. Moynihan, a delegate to the St. Louis caucus, has been actively interested in the work of the Legion.

ACTIVE IN WESTERN MASS.

In the Worcester district Colonel Herbert has been active for the past few weeks and busy every night addressing proposed posts of the Legion. He has been assisted by David Nolan, who served with General Cole during the war, Major Thomas F. Foley, Lieutenant James R. Kelley and many other prominent men of that section.

Colonel "Bill" Dolan and Major Henry Wheelock of Fitchburg, have been busy in that section in the organization of the Legion and have the work well under way.

In Springfield, Kenneth Page and Donald Green, are working day and night in their efforts to interest the soldiers, sailors and marines in the Legion.

Major G. Morgan King, former assistant adjustant of the Yankee Division, has a post formed in Hyde Park and Major Albert C. Gray has plans maturing in Medford.

Malden, Cambridge, New Bedford, Arlington, Revere, Quincy, Roxbury, Beverly, Brighton-Allston, Melrose and Wakefield, are already well organized, interest in the American Legion in these places being very high.

Petition to the Secretary of War and Secretary of the Navy to send Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Home with Six Months' Pay

Sign this petition, get your friends to sign it, and forward it to the Boston American, 80 Summer st., Boston, Mass.

To the Honorable Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War:

To the Honorable Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy:

The undersigned respectfully urge you to return to their homes as soon as possible the soldiers, sailors and marines who have accomplished so brilliantly every object America had in the war.

We urge, also, that you obtain the necessary authority to pay these men their military wages for six months, or for some sufficient period after their discharge from the army until they can obtain useful and remunerative employment.

We urge this as an act of simple justice by a great nation to its heroes.

BRAVES OUT TO LAND FINAL

Cubs Look Like Real Champions in Games to Date With Stallings' Men

It's a cinch, as has been shown in the last few days, that the Braves aren't stealing anybody's pitching signs. After a batting surge on Dowdy Day that augured a happy week, the clouters have faded into back scenes. Pinch hits seem to appear about as often as big crowds this season.

The innocuous spitball has baffled the Tribals during the two days of the Cub visit, and the Braves have yet to score a run against the Champions, who haven't appeared at all like titlists yet.

They mean to the Braves, did a bit better against [illegible] than they did when [illegible] but they did not get the [illegible] when they needed anything. [illegible] all the hits in the world are [illegible] if they don't ride runners [illegible]

JINX STILL ON TRAIL.

Everything [illegible] going wrong, despite [illegible] that the team continues to show flashes of really good baseball ability. F'rinstance, Rabbit Maranville [illegible] is again the whip that can convert thumps to the back-grass of the infield into putouts.

Herzog [illegible] everything and everybody [illegible] much better than [illegible] of the past couple of years [illegible] Miss Fortune continues to attend daily and nothing does [illegible] the slip means disaster.

Had Tragesser made a good throw to Red Smith, the first [illegible] would not have [illegible] the bostties [illegible] all probability would have been blanked in the fourth frame. However, there was the bad cluck, and then followed a parade of hits that rocked the game into smithereens. Mister [illegible] was [illegible] from his moorings and [illegible] that eventually to win, 5-0.

ALECK TO WORK TODAY.

After today's pastime the Cubs depart for other parts and intended to show their big ace, [illegible] Alexander as a sort of a finale. Aleck hasn't won one yet, and there was some hope for the faithful in that little fact.

Although Keating [illegible] up as the logical choice, Nehf seemed most likely to toss. Arthur is in form, one of the best southpaws in the game and he has rested up since last Saturday's victory.

Those Cubs are not any more dangerous against southpaws than they are against regular pitching and Arthur in trim can get the best of them down.

Grant is still pulling all wires to get hard hitting Davey Robertson for his outfield, but to date hasn't succeeded in doing any business at all with Owner Stoneham of the Giants. But he still hopes, as does Manager Stallings, and everybody else.

Baseball News and Notes

The Braves have released a couple of outfielders, Joe Kelly who has been with them, and Al Wickland, who hasn't. Joe goes to Toledo and Al to St. Paul. The former sang his swan song, so to speak, by busting out a pinch double.

* * *

Our old friend Dutch Leonard stepped out and won his first start for the Tigers, beating the A's 3-1. He was hit safely but five times. If Dutch keeps that up the Jungaleers will surely be in the chase.

* * *

Luque, who has been winning games with great regularity for the Reds, came to grief in Philadelphia. After six scoreless chapters, he was nicked for one tally in the seventh and three in the eighth. The Phillies triumphed, 4-1.

* * *

That former star, Al Mamaux, got off to another bad start and was assaulted for three runs right under the guns by the Cardinals. As Doak was holding the Dodgers to four hits and one run, [illegible] easy to see why the Westerners [illegible]

HAVING had an invitation to climb Mr. Locklear's ladder, we wish to announce that we just had our shoes shined.

LESS than twenty years ago Salvation Army bands were pinched in Philadelphia. Not for speeding, but not for speeding. If they loitered in front of a saloon the proprietor would complain to the police. In those days it was legal to loiter inside of a saloon, but not outside. Up would rattle the caboose and away would flatwheel the Salvo to the hoosegow. This may have happened in every city in the works.

We chirp of Philly because that is the town we remember. The City of Brotherly Love, where the brothers vote like twins, is richly spangled with corner saloons. Proprietors of glue parlors didn't like the singing outside, because their customers couldn't hear themselves drinking.

Any music loving, fair-minded judge would have sentenced the Salvo to a few thousand years in jail on the strength of the slide trombone and bass drum alone.

NEXT Friday at Sheepshead Bay Mr. Locklear will hang by his toes from the Aurora Borealis and leap to a flying trapeze hanging from a sunbeam. He is taking no chance unless some careless angel drops a banana peel on a cloud.

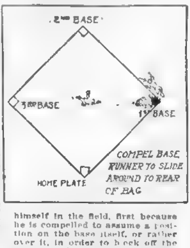
How to Play Baseball

THIS is the third of a series of 100 articles by Hugh S. Fullerton, celebrated baseball expert, on "How to Play Baseball." In this lesson Mr. Fullerton continues to play first base. These articles will be a feature of the American sport pages each day. Don't miss them!

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

One of the greatest features of first base play is holding base runners to the base and aiding the pitcher in stopping base running. This is perhaps the most important feature of the modern defensive game and is much dependent upon the development of the balk motion, especially by left-handed pitchers.

In holding up base runners the first baseman instantly handicaps himself in the field, first because he is compelled to assume a position on the base itself, or rather over it, in order to block off the runner and compel him to slide behind and away from the base in returning and second, because the defensive position assumed by the first baseman has resulted in the new system of attack, which consists of trying to hit behind the runner in run and hit plays.



COMPEL BASE RUNNER TO SLIDE AROUND TO REAR OF BAG

The right field hitting when runners are on the bags has been highly developed, and with the first baseman compelled to play on top of the bag the gap between first and second base is largely widened. In fielding balls hit between himself and the second baseman the first baseman is handicapped not only by the fact that his range is smaller, but by the fact that he is following the runner toward the ball.

In blocking runners the first baseman must not take too many chances. His effort should be to get his right leg between the player and the base. His position should be a quarter turn toward the right, his feet in the natural position, but his body swung so as to take balls thrown low to his right (the proper place for catching runners off the bag) and touch quickly. If his leg blocks the runner's arm and he touches quickly the out is accomplished.

It is necessary to practice with all the pitchers to study their shoulder motions and to know when the throw is coming.

A throw either from the pitcher or catcher which catches the first baseman unprepared is disastrous. The majority of balls thrown to first base by the pitcher are thrown merely as bluffs to drive the runner back and to make him over anxious, and the real attempt is made when he is expected to attempt a steal and therefore will be overbalanced and unable to make a quick jump back to first.

Often when a base runner is of the eager type, and a steal is the expected play, it is advisable to make half a dozen throws, fret the runner and then make a fast shot to catch him. This throw usually is made by the pitcher without looking toward first save as he throws, just enough to evade the balk rule, and is extremely hard to handle.

General Pershing Will Have "Scout" at Stadium Games

General Pershing has his eye on the big intercollegiate track championships in the Harvard Stadium, Friday and Saturday.

He has sent Colonel Joseph H. Thompson to attend the games to select athletes who will uphold the athletic prowess of the United States in the Inter-Allied games to be held in France between June 22 and July 6.

Almost every one of the 572 contestants in the championships has been in some branch of service and, consequently, will be eligible to represent this country in the army games.

A large number of star athletes have already been signed up for the allied meet.

DEMPSEY GOT $16 FOR GO

By DAMON RUNYON.

After being in New York a few days, Dempsey and Price found more economical lodgings in a place at the corner of One Hundred and Twenty-fourth street and Morningside avenue.

"We only had one bed," says Dempsey, "and it wasn't such a wide bed, at that. I've told you how fat Price was, and I'm not small myself; so when we got into that bed together, I'll say there wasn't much room left.

"And it was hot! Holy mackerel, how hot it was!

"Besides carrying all that weight Price had a bad cough which would get stirred up if he moved around much. Then he would cough to beat the cars.

"Well, the boxing game was open in New York then, and Price hustled around trying to get a match for me. Nobody in New York had ever heard of me, and of course they weren't breaking their necks to give an unknown a bout.

"Price fell into Billy Grupp's gymnasium, up in Harlem, where a lot of fighters train, and a lot of the fight gang hang out, and when they found he was a manager fresh from the sticks looking for a match for his man, they commenced to kid him. They sent him all over town on phony errands, and Price would come back sweating like a bull, and all fagged out.

DEBUT AT FAIRMOUNT CLUB.

"Then he would lie down on the bed, and sweat and cough, and I claim if ever a manager had a tough time Price was the man. He finally got Tom McArdle to give me a match at the Fairmount Club, up in the Bronx. I got $16 for that bout. It came off one Saturday night. Say," Dempsey adds reflectively, "that was one hot night."

I can support our hero's testimony on that point. I was hot. I happened to run into Jimmy Johnston and his heavyweight fighter, "the agile astounding Andre Anderson," on Broadway early that evening. They were just about to pile into Jimmy's car.

"Come on," said James. "Come on up to the Fairmount with us and as soon as Andre gets through boxing a bird up there we'll take a ride and cool off."

It was too hot to go on such a journey, but hotter than that to remain downtown, and so I crawled into the car.

"Who you boxing, Andre?" I asked, en route, by way of making conversation.

"I don't know," said Andre.

"Some bum," interjected Johnston. Mark again the long arm of coincidence to which I have called attention before. The first fellow Dempsey boxed in New York was handled by a man who was in the group that heard Dempsey's name the first time it was uttered there.

LACKED CERTAIN ESSENTIALS.

Johnston, of course, had long since forgotten Billy Roche's encomiums on that Western unknown, Jack Dempsey. Prior to the introductions from the Fairmount ring I doubt if he recalled the name of Andre's opponent for that night, but it was Dempsey that Andre was going to fight.

"Some bum." Fair enough. Andre could beat "bums."

You may remember him—an enormous, blonde fellow, who had been variously a wrestler and boxer and who subsequently became a soldier. He lacked certain essentials for a tough [illegible] certain very important essentials, but Johnston was sitting up nights nursing him along.

"This won't take long," Jimmy promised faithfully as we left the car. "Not over a couple of rounds," and Andre nodded his head in solemn affirmation. He believed every thing Jimmy said.

There was just a handful of people in the Fairmount Club that night, [illegible] nothing else the usual Saturday night gatherings of those days. I stood back near the door while awaiting my promised motor ride, to get any Bronx breeze that might [illegible] sneak through. It was [illegible] the name of Andre's [illegible] as it was [illegible] by the referee.

Leo Flynn, the old campaigner of Fistiana, who has handled many a fight of high and low degree, came along and we stood conversing. My back was to the ring. I was conscious of a familiar shuffling of feet on the canvas, and of the occasional clang of a gong, but I confess I was paying mighty little attention to the hostilities.

DEMPSEY IMPRESSES FLYNN.

"Who's that boxing Andre?" Flynn asked suddenly. He had been casually eyeing the fight over my shoulder.

"I don't know. Some bum," I answered, echoing both Johnston and Anderson.

"Well, he may be a bum," commented Leo, "but he's giving Mister Andre a jolly fine pasting for himself."

Then I looked around and beheld a big, blackish looking young man, with beetling brows wading into "the agile astounding one" and slapping him around the ring using both hands to that effect.

"That fellow can fight," said Leo, oracularly.

He spoke a mouthful, but he didn't realize then that he was talking about a man who was to one day knock the apple of his eye right off the perch. Leo spent a long time coddling big Bill Brennan, only to see him smacked into unconsciousness by Jack Dempsey.

It was long after Leo had first seen Jack, but even that long ago Leo's practiced eye discerned something in the crude youth that caused him to pronounce the judgment he did.

And today Leo says if Willard wins at Toledo on July 4 L. Flynn will be the brokest man in forty-eight States.

THRILLING ROMANCE OF AN AMERICAN GIRL

CHAPTER XXIX—Continued.

AND the girls laughed [illegible] Sengoun led one of them out at a rack-page.

The other smiled and looked at Neeland, and, seating herself leaned on the table watching the whirl on the floor.

"Don't you dance?" she asked, with a sidelong glance out of her splendid black eyes.

"Yes; but I'm likely to do most of my dancing on your pretty feet."

"Merci! In that case I prefer a cigarette."

She selected one from his case, lighted it, folded her arms on the table, and continued to gaze at the dancers.

"I'm tired tonight," she remarked.

"You dance beautifully."

"Thank you."

Sengoun, flushed and satisfied, came back with his gipsy partner when the music ceased.

"Now I hope we may have some more singing!" he exclaimed, as they seated themselves and a waiter filled their great, bubble-shaped glasses.

And he did sing at the top of his delightful voice when the balalaikas swept out into a ringing and familiar song, and the two gypsy girls sang, too—laughed and sang, holding the frosty goblets high in the sparkling light.

It was evident to Neeland that the song was a favorite one with Russians. Sengoun was quite overcome; they all touched goblets.

"Bravo, my little Tziganes!" he said with happy emotion. "My little compatriots! My little tawny panthers of the Caucasus! What do you call yourselves in this bandbox of a country where two steps backward take you across any frontier?"

His dancing partner laughed till her sequins jingled from throat to ankle:

"They call us Fifi and Nini," she replied. "Ask yourself why!"

"For example," added the other girl, "we rise from this table and thank you. There is nothing further. C'est fini! C'est Fifi—Nini—comprenez vous, Prince Erlik?"

"H[illegible]! What?" exclaimed Sengoun. "I'm known, it appears even to that devilish name of mine."

Everybody laughed.

Gypsy's Trade

"After all," he said, more soberly, "it's a gypsy's trade to know everybody and everything. There!" He slapped a goldpiece on the table. "A kiss apiece against a louis that you don't know my comrade's name and nation."

The girl called Nini laughed:

"We're quite willing to kiss you, Prince Erlik, but a louis d'or is not a copper penny. And your comrade is American and his name is Tchames."

"James!" exclaimed Sengoun.

"I said so—Tchames."

"What else?"

"Nilan."

"Neeland?"

"I said so."

Sengoun placed the goldpiece in Nini's hand and looked at Neeland with an uncomfortable laugh.

"I ought to know a gypsy, but they always astonish me, these Tziganes. Tell us some more, Nini——" He beckoned a waiter and pointed indignantly at the empty goblets.

"There will be war," remarked Nini with a shrug of her bare, brown shoulders over which her hair and her gilded sequins fell in a bright mass.

"Why?" asked Neeland, smiling.

"Why? Because, for one thing, you have brought war into Europe."

"Come, now! No mystery!" said Sengoun gaily. "Explain how my comrade [illegible] brought [illegible] it's fraud."

Nini looked at Kneeland.

[illegible] without replying, and she laughed at him, showing her white teeth.

"You brought the Yellow Devil into Europe, M'sieu Nilan! Erlik the Yellow Demon. Where [illegible] is there is unrest. Where he rests there is war."

"You're very clever," retorted Kneeland, quite out of his countenance.

"Yes, we are," said Fifi, with her quick smile. "And who but M'sieu Nilan should admit it?"

"Very [illegible]," repeated Neeland, still [illegible] easy. "But if the Yellow Devil you say I brought into Europe must have been resting in America then. And, if so, why is there no war there?"

"There would have been with Mexico. You bring [illegible] the Yellow Demon here but just in time!"

Neeland Silent

Neeland, unquiet to discover how much these casual strangers knew about his own intimate affairs, had become silent and almost glum.

But the [illegible] gloom which invaded him came from resentment toward those people who had followed him from Brookhollow to Paris, and who, in the very moment of victory, had snatched that satisfaction from him.

He thought of Kestner and of Breslau of Scheherazade, and the terrible episode in her stateroom.

Except that he had seized the box in the Brookhollow house, there was nothing in his subsequent conduct on which he could plume himself. He could not congratulate himself on his wisdom; sheer luck had carried him through as far as the rue Soleil d'Or—mere chance, and that capricious fortune which sometimes convoys the stupid, fatuous and astigmatic.

Then he thought of Rue Carew. And, in his bosom, an intense desire to distinguish himself began to burn.

If there were any way on earth to trace that accursed box——

"Fifi!"

"M'sieu?"

"You're so clever! Where is that Yellow Devil now?"

"Pouf!" giggled Fifi. "On its way to Berlin, pardie!"

"That's easy to say. Tell me something else more expensive."

Nini said, surprised:

"What we know is free to Prince Erlik's friend. Did you think we sell to Russians?"

"I don't know anything about you or where you get your information," said Neeland. "I suppose you're in the Secret Service of the Russian government."

"Mon ami, Nilan," said Fifi, smiling, "we should feel lonely outside the Secret Service. Few in Europe are outside—few in the world, fewer in the half-world. As for us Tziganes, who belong to neither, the business of everybody becomes our secret to sell for a silver piece—but not to Russians in the moment of peril! . . . Nor to their comrades. What do you desire to know, comrade?"

"Anything," he said simply, "that might help me to regain what I have lost."

"And what do you suppose," exclaimed Fifi, opening her magnificent black eyes very wide. "Did you imagine that nobody was paying any attention to what happened in the rue Soleil d'Or this noon?"

Nini laughed.

"The word [illegible] taxi [illegible] and secret [illegible] Entente do you suppose knew of it half an hour after it [illegible]? From the Trocadero to Montparnasse, from the [illegible] du Jour to [illegible] was watched.

All Watched

"Five embassies and legations were instantly under redoubled surveillance; hundreds of cafes, bars, restaurants, hotels, all the theatres, gardens, cabarets, brasseries.

"Your [illegible] of Al[illegible] are not neglected, va! But, to my idea, they got out of Paris before we watchers knew of the affair at all. [illegible] by rail. God knows [illegible] absent [illegible] which had begun [illegible]. But if we ever [illegible] Minna Minti, we wear toys in our garters which will certainly persuade her to take a little stroll with us."

After a silence Neeland said:

"Is Minna Minti, then, so well known?"

"Not at the Opera Comique," replied Fifi with a shrug, "but since then."

CHAPTER XXX.

The Cafe des Bulgars.

THEIR adieux to Fifi and Nini were elaborate and complicated by bursts of laughter. The Tziganes recommended Captain Sengoun to go home and seek further adventures on his pillow, and had it not been for the gay babble of the fountain and the persistent perfume of flowers, he might have followed their advice.

It was after the two young men had left the Jardin Russe that Captain Sengoun positively but affectionately refused to relinquish possession of Neland's arm.

"Dear friend," he explained, "I am just waking up and I do not wish to go to bed for days and days."

"When I was twelve," he said, "I had known already the happiness of the battle-shock against Kurd, Mongol and Tartar. At eighteen my ambition was to slap the faces of three human monsters. I told everybody that I was making arrangements to do this, and I started for Brusa after my first monster—Fehim Effendi—but the Vali telegraphed to the Grand Vizier, and the Grand Vizier ran to Abdul the Damned, and Abdul yelled for Sir Nicholas O'Connor, and they caught me in the Pera Palace and handed me over to my embassy."

Neeland shouted with laughter:

"Who were the other monsters?" he asked.

"The other two whose countenances I desired to slap? Oh, one was Abdul Houda, the Sultan's star-reader, who chattered about my Dark Star horoscope in the Yildiz. And the other was the Sultan."

"Who?"

"Abdul Hamid."

"What! You wished to slap his face?"

"Certainly. But Kutchuk Said and Kamil Pasha requested me not to [illegible] accompanied by gendarmes."

"You'd have lost your life," remarked Neeland.

"Yes. But then war would surely have [illegible] Emperor would [illegible] held the Dardanelles [illegible] Turkish flag is now flying over German guns and German gunners."

"There's a German place, now!" exclaimed Sengoun, delighted.

And Neeland turning to look, perceived the illuminated sign of the Cafe des Bulgars.

German champagne had now become Sengoun's fixed idea; nothing could dissuade him from it, nothing persuade him into a homeward-bound taxi. So Neeland, with a rather hazy idea that he ought not to [illegible] entered the cafe with Sengoun, and they seated themselves on a leather wall lounge before one of the numerous marble topped tables.

"Listen," he said in a low voice to his companion. "This is a German cafe and we must be careful what we say. I'm not any too prudent and I may forget this; but don't you!"

"Sengoun," he said under his breath, "that type who just came in is an American gambler named [illegible] and he is here with other gamblers for the purpose of obtaining political information for some government other than my own."

Sengoun regarded the new arrival with amiable curiosity.

"That worm? Oh, well, every city in Europe swarms with such maggots, you know. It would be quite funny if he tries any blandishments on us, wouldn't it?"

"He may. He's a capper. He's looking at us now. I believe he remembers having seen me in the train."

"As for an hour or two at chemin-de-fer, baccarat, or roulette," remarked Sengoun, "I am not averse to a——"

"Won't You Please Send Me a Sweetheart Before They're 'All Out of Uniform'?"

ONCE there was a girl—who did her hair in shell-shaped muffs over her ears, who wasn't happy when she knew her nose was shiny, who had a dark-blue serge suit with stripings of silk braid around it to wear on the street—who nimbly trotted forth in it—a slim, plump, Frenchy Silhouette, who ALWAYS wore black silk stockings and black shoes—never white ones; who had whispery-sounding taffeta like leaves in the forest at play with a soft wind, to wear in the house with crispy lawn collar and cuffs, who dreamed about war and peace, and LIBERTY VICTORY bonds, and Elsie Ferguson, and the beautiful, darling, intoxicating PRESENT—never at all about the Past who plucked at her skirts with a dark finger, or the Future who crooked a silvery one with a smile of honey, who loved lots of hats and couldn't have very many, who still wished that she had been a boy for once in her rosy life when the War came and shook its sword and the young men surged to the front and answered.

You can see very plainly that she is just one of the sweet, dainty, smart, little maids that bloom in the town. And she prayed, did she, on her folded knees, these gorgeous, incomparable days when the town is glorified by the soldier "coming home" by bewildering thousands. "Please send me a Sweetheart while the boys are still in uniform!"

Stories the Dewdrops Told

(Written for the Soldiers of the United States School Garden Army by Katharine Whipple Dobbs)

I. Dolly Meets the Dewdrop Fa[illegible]

DOLLY opened her eyes as wide as possible and then winked them a great many times and opened them wide again. She was perfectly sure that a moment before she had a seen a little green insect light on the rose vine—an insect with gauzy wings whose pale pink and green seemed to melt and mix with one another in the most beautiful way. If she had been older she would have called them "iridescent."

Now, when she looked again, she was equally certain that it was not an [illegible] a tiny figure of a lady dressed in the softest and laciest little [illegible] that floated around her like the gossamer of a spider's web [illegible] her hand she held a [illegible] pot not [illegible] and as [illegible] it over ever so [illegible] poured one bright [illegible] of water upon a leaf [illegible] in the early morning [illegible] as if it held the spirit of all the rainbows, and Dolly stared at it, perfectly charmed with its pure beauty.

"[illegible] dewdrop is pretty?" said a small but very musical voice that could not come from any one but the little lady standing on the rose leaf.

"Oh, I think it is lovely," said Dolly. "But where did you get it, and who are you? Oh, I beg your pardon—I forgot it was rude to ask so many questions."

"Not at all—I am glad you are interested. I am a Dewdrop Fairy and I, with many others, come every Summer morning to pour these bright drops you see on the leaves and flowers."

"But I don't see any others," said Dolly. "Are you all alone this morning? There are lots of dewdrops."

"No, I am not alone; there are hundreds of my brothers and sisters all around you, but the funny thing about us is that you can only see one of us at a time, although we are always busy pouring out our dewdrops on all the plants."

"But why do you do it?" asked Dolly, who was—as you may have suspected—of a rather inquiring disposition.

"In the first place," said the Dewdrop Fairy, "we give all the flowers and vegetables a nice early drink which they need very much if Uncle Rain does not happen to pay them a visit. Besides that, these dewdrops have a magic power—didn't you know that?"

"Oh, no," cried the little girl; "Magic! Oh, what kind of magic is it? And may I know something about it?"

"You seem a kind little girl and I always like to help mortals when I can, although my real business is with the plants and shrubs. The magic of the dewdrops—but here, look closer than that—put your right down as near as you can get it, and tell me what you see."

Dolly stooped over and put her eye as close to the dewdrop as she dared, for fear of spoiling it. As her eye came nearer the dewdrop seemed to grow larger and larger until it was as large as a marble—as large as a baseball—as large as a full-blown balloon. And as the dewdrop grew, so did Dolly's eyes expand until they had reached a size that no one would have dreamed of.

"Well, what do you see?" asked the fairy.

Economical Housewife

Mr. Summers was very fond of trout fishing and each year tried to have at least a week of good sport. The day before he was to start on his long-looked-for vacation his wife entered the room smiling and showing her husband some sticky speckled papers. "For goodness sake," he exclaimed, "what are you doing with those old fly papers?" "Why, I saved them for you from last season!" she replied. "You know you said you always had to buy flies when you went fishing!"

When a Girl Marries

A NEW SERIAL OF YOUNG MARRIED LIFE

Ann Lisle Writes Interestingly of the Trials and Slight Jealousies of a Bride

By Ann Lisle

CHAPTER CXXIII.—(Continued).

Copyright, 1919, King Features Syndicate Inc.

JIM didn't laugh as I had intended. Instead, he stared at me with hostile eyes and ejaculated:

"Well, of all the rubbish! I can't understand women. I tell you my fortune's at stake, and you stand there making fool jokes."

"I'm sorry. I thought it would do your nerves good to laugh at me," I replied. "Now—if you'll explain a bit about your—deal, I'll try to understand."

Jim ceased pacing up and down the floor and sank into a chair in the old familiar position, with his knees crossed and his fingers encircling his lame ankle.

"It's like this," he began. "The Colonara Company starts boosting Colonara oil a few months ago when they advertise a gusher, an oil well that runs 50,000 barrels a month. Can you imagine how their stock climbs?"

"Yes, I can," I replied, delighted at the simplicity thus far of my study of "high finance."

"All right. Colonara goes from 25 to 80 in about a week. Then a crowd of fellows who were caught short try to force the stock down so they can buy low enough to cover their losses. And they get hold of how the Colonara gusher is spouting 50,000 barrels a month—but 50,000 barrels of salt water—not of oil, and Colonara slumps to about 12. Now do you begin to see?"

"But Jim—that wasn't honest. You aren't risking $5,000 of borrowed money—in a shady transaction—are you?" I cried.

"The ethics of the 'Salt Water Oil bunch don't affect us, Anne," replied Jim dryly. "Because I'm on the other side of the market. I'm a bull—not a bear. Buying, not selling."

"Buying! Buying stock that other men are trying to prove worthless?" I cried.

"For a woman who has just finished declaring she can't understand the stock game you show rather—positive opinions," declared Jim, shaking his head impatiently. Then he went on, "Don't be frightened. I'm not buying a worthless stock. The Colonara people are fighting. They invited a well-known engineer to come down with a commission and look over their holdings. His first look reassured him—and even before he made his official report, he told someone in confidence there was oil there all right. And I got it from the inside that I'd better buy. So I raked up all my available cash and bought a few shares at 12. . . . And as little scraps of advanced information began to dribble out about the way the expert was going to report, Colonara started to rise a bit through the inside buying.' That's all clear—isn't it?"

Scarcely waiting for my reply, Jim continued:

"Well, I borrow my five thou' and bought in all the Colonara Salt Water Oil I could get. The report came out officially this morning. Salt Water Oil's rising. The report is going to be that not only is the gusher producing all the company claims, but that there are a couple of other good wells running rich. Salt Water Oil ought to go to eighty before closing."

"Jim," I pleaded, "tell we just one thing. Your advance information wasn't what they call a leak? Had you a right to take advantage of what you knew?"

"Why not?" demanded Jim. "I might as well make a fortune as the next chap. And if the dope Doris West's brother gave her was right——"

"Doris West's brother?"

"Sure. He's the engineer who went down to make the report. Didn't I tell you that in the first place?"

"Then it was Miss West who gave you your information?"

(To Be Continued.)

"Age Cannot Wither"

A tradesman was brought before the magistrates charged with having sold unwholesome articles for consumption as food. The charge was fully proved. "I wish to point out to the court," said counsel for the defence in a dignified tone, "that the house of business that I have the honor to defend was founded in 1803."

"Has it renewed its stock since that date?" asked the magistrate.

Stocks Irregular in New York and Boston Markets

STEELS LOWER, WHILE OILS ADVANCE

Marine Issues Were Early Features for Activity and Strength

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were irregular in New York at noon and the market tone was rather heavy. While prices failed to continue to advance, trading did not slacken much in volume. Transactions for the first hour exceeded 420,000 shares and business had the usual breadth. Steels were weak as a group, while oils showed strength. The marine stocks were higher and active early in the session, but grew quiet and sold lower later. Sugars were strong, as were a number of specialties. Motors and coppers developed a sagging tendency. Rails receded, while equipments made gains. Baldwin advanced more than two points.

U. S. Steel at 12 o'clock was off 1⅛ at 107½, after ranging from 106⅞ to 107⅞. Among the weakest issues were Industrial Alcohol, U. S. Food Products, American Can, American Woolen common and Willys Overland. They were all off a point or more.

Strongest issues included Corn Products, the Marines, American International, American Sugar, Beet Sugar, American Ice, Texas Co., Mexican Petroleum, Pan American, Tobacco Products and U. S. Rubber.

Among issues to sell during the morning at record highest prices were Corn Products, Marine preferred, U. S. Rubber and American Ice. Tobacco Products sold at its year's highest.

U. S. STEEL WEAK AND ACTIVE.

At the opening the market was firm and prices ruled higher, with General Motors, Corn Products, American Sugar, Beet Sugar, the Marines, Keystone Tire, American Linseed Oil, American Ice, American Writing Paper preferred, International Paper, California Packing, American International, Pan American, Tobacco Products and Royal Dutch of New York all showing a point or more gain within thirty minutes. At the start Studebaker and U. S. Rubber were among the weak issues. There was good buying by the public at the outset, but when this business was over bears resumed operations and the market became irregular. U. S. Steel started with a small gain and then receded. It was active. Its decline was slight and, in fact, the list in its entirety was rather narrow in price range. New York tractions were strong for awhile. Early strength of Marines was attributed to statements in regard to liquidations by the company and the necessity of calling 6 per cent bonds at 102.

SPECULATORS MORE CAUTIOUS.

There was more caution on the part of speculators who have been conducting bull operations, and bears seemed to have more confidence that the market must undergo a severe reaction soon. Th public, however, has not been much impressed as yet apparently by the many mornings given by brokers and others. The money situation may alter and prove an important factor in speculation. The statement that brokers' loans in the Wall Street district now exceed a billion dollars is giving concern in conservative quarters. The most important financial interests are said to have disposed of the greater part of their margin holdings on the advance. The public has been the cheif buyer. Many lenders believe that if there is a severe reaction it will not mark the ned of the bull movement, but that prices will resume an upward movement after any decline pronounced enough to result in general readjustment.

Sugar Exports This Year

The American Sugar Refining Company is expected to ship more than 260,000 tons of sugar abroad in 1919, compared with total exports by all refiners of about 150,000 tons in 1918.

A situation has been created in these two issues within recent weeks of a character which may have escaped the attention of the average investor.

We have investigated the situation to a point which makes it worthy of ones careful attention.

PRICES DECLINE ON BOSTON EXCHANGE

But the Range Is Narrow Throughout Morning Trading

Steadiness characterized the local market at the opening, but early changes were narrow and of little significance. During the morning prices took a downward course, and before the end of that period the market was irregular and the majority of active issues had declined.

Amoskeag sold at a new highest record price. Mayflower-Old Colony was active and fluctuated between a small loss and a small gain. Among issues to show declines in the second hour were Edison, Gray & Davis, Waldorf, Helvetia, New River preferred, Nipissing, Walworth, Swift & Co., Copper Range, Isle Royale, Mohawk, Fairbanks, United Shoe, Ventura and Stewart.

Among issues to show gains were Allouez, Pond Creek, U. S. Smelting, Swift International, Libby, Wolverine and Bigheart.

The market was active during the morning, especially United Shoe, Ventura, Helvetia, Nipissing and Swift & Co. Low priced coppers were the most in evidence among mining shares.

A Butte dispatch says that to the northwest of the faul on he 2,500-foot level of its Colorado mine the Davis-Daly Copper Company has picked up by cross-cutting six feet of ore averaging 12¾ per cent copper.

FRENCH RESUME COPPER BUYING IN AMERICA

According to report French buying of American copper was resumed as soon as the government of France rescinded the embargo on imports. A sale of 500 tons has been booked, and some inquiries have been received from the same country. The Italian government is expected to lift its embargo soon. In a few weeks it is believed all Europe will be an open market. One authority says: "The stocks of copper held by the allied governments at the time of the armistice are fast disappearing. The demand for copper is improving and in view of the approach of the time when all Europe will be a buyer in large quantities for prompt shipment, the American stock will soon begin to disappear."

GRIFFITH HERE FOR HIS LATEST PHOTO-DRAMA

"Broken Blossoms" to Be Presented Tonight at Colonial Theatre

The man who first succeeded in raising the motion picture entertainment to the two-dollar level, David Wark Griffith, has arrived in Boston to oversee the final arrangements for his repertory season at the Colonial Theatre, which is to begin tonight with the presentation of his newest and most sensational photodrama, "Broken Blossoms."

"Naturally, we producers of motion pictures are always striving for something new and I hope I am the one to have found it in the combination of actual pantomime with the pictures," said Mr. Griffith. "I think, of course, that the story my new picture tells would have stood by itself, but I introduced the actual prologue with real actors simply that the audience might get at once into the atmosphere of spiritual mysticism that pervades the story by Thomas Burke, which has been the basis for 'Broken Blossoms.'"

"Don't you think this idea will grow with the introduction of speaking actors as an aid to the motion picture?" he was asked.

"I do not know," said Mr. Griffith, "I wish I did. The one question I ask myself is, will such a welding of the two arts of the voiceless and the spoken drama serve to bring whatever message the stage has to deliver more forcibly to the people? If so, then such an evolution of the cinematagraph is inevitable, though it will require a genius, both of the camera and the stage, to bring it about."

RETHAPFEL PROGRAM FOR PRIVATE AUDIENCE

A large audience gathered yesterday at the Shubert Theatre for a private showing of the first Rethapfel Unit Program. At the end of the program Harry Segal, the Boston manager of the program, was congratulated by the guests. The program, which has been given and is being given in many of the first-class theatres throughout the country, was personally arranged by Samuel L. Rethapfel, well known in film circles as former managing director of the Strand, Rivoli and Rialto Theatres in New York. The music, which plays so important a part in the success of the program, was arranged by Mr. Rethapfel and Hugo Riesenfield, in accordance with the belief of Mr. Rethapfel that the music and the picture should come from the same creative mind, and should harmonize perfectly.

PENNSYLVANIA ROAD STOCKHOLDERS INCREASE

The stock of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, long a favorite with investors all over the world, is now held almost wholly in this country. When the next dividend is paid on May 31 less than 2 per cent. of the amount distributed will be paid out of the United States. Before the war about 15 per cent. of each quarterly dividend was sent abroad.

Stockholders steadily increase in number. There are now 110,374, compared with 109,546 in February last. The increase for a year has been 7,371 and for two years 16,735. When the war began Europeans sold American securities to invest the proceeds with home governments or for other reasons. In five years $65,000,000 worth of Pennsylvania Railroad stock has passed from foreign into American hands.

AMERICAN DYE EXPORTS HAVE BECOME IMPORTANT

The production of dyes and dyestuffs in this country is an infant industry and the result of the war. If protected by tariff legislation, interests which have developed it claim they will be able to supply this country with quality as well as quantity equalling German production.

Dyes and dyestuffs exports in March this year amounted to $880,247, while for nine months ending with that month they totaled $14,066,634, against $12,895,813 for the previous corresponding period and $7,337,535 in 1917. These products were shipped to Denmark, France, Spain, England, Canada, Mexico, Argentina, Brazil, China, Dutch East Indies and Japan.

China was our biggest customer for aniline dyes, in March taking $87,836 worth. France took approximately 70 per cent. of our total logwood shipments. Japan imported $100,000 various dyes and dyestuffs.

Governor Should Not Veto Legislature Pay Bill

Give Members What They Would Be Worth if They Did Their Full Duty, and Then Make Them Do It

It is reported by Governor Coolidge's friends that he dislikes the bill passed in the House and denounced by the Boston Transcript as a "grab bill," namely, the bill to increase the salary of the members of the Legislature to $1,500. We hope that the Governor will resist the pressure brought to bear upon him from certain "high brow" sources to veto the bill.

It is curious to hear certain gentlemen protest against giving members of the Legislature an honorable compensation for their services somewhat approaching fairness when these same protestants have not in the past hesitated to pay many times the salary of certain legislators for the passage of legislation favorable to themselves.

Nobody knows better than Governor Coolidge, because none has had greater experience in the Legislature, that if a member of either the House or the Senate does his duty, he earns a great deal more than $1,500, which it is proposed to pay him. It is true that too many of our legislators do not do their duty, do not attend the sessions, do not attend the committee meetings, do not read widely or think deeply on questions, as it is their duty to do if they are to make our laws. But we cannot base our compensation of such men upon the worth of undutiful service. It must be based upon the worth of faithful service, which involves hard work for long hours.

If economy is desired in the cost of legislation, the State Senate could easily be abolished with great profit to the State. But we can imagine the outcries of the very gentlemen who oppose the increase of salaries against abolishing the Senate which is the place where for generations they have buried their dead.

The Senate this year, the American is bound to say, has been an exceptionally good Senate for Massachusetts Senates. Both the Senate and the House are showing the good effects of the existence of the Initiative and Referendum, the absence of the old Elevated lobby and the abolition of paid recess committees. It is true that the associated industries has come with a lobby to take the place of the old corporation lobbies, but they are still immature, and while their purpose is as bad, they are not yet such veterans and their backers have not such power.

Moreover, if we pay the legislators more the temptation will be less for many of them to take campaign contributions from interests desiring favorable consideration at the State House.

Pay the legislators what they would be worth if they did their full duty, and then make them do it. Do not accept neglected duty as the basis of emolument.

YOU Build the Ships With Tax Money

But You Won't Own Them

Copyright, 1919, Star Company

Farmers through their representative, Benjamin Marsh, at Washington, demand Government ownership of merchant vessels. This interests ALL Americans.

If the Government owned and operated its ships, built with money taken from the people, the ships would be managed for the benefit of farmers and other American citizens, not for the benefit of a few private owners.

Low ocean freight rates mean that the farmer gets more for his wheat and his meat. When his products are shipped to Liverpool and other foreign ports, in competition with similar products from South America, Australia and Canada, the American farmer must pay the difference in freight.

Everybody knows that with American shipping owned by private individuals, as in the past, the shipping rates will constitute a heavy handicap for the American producer.

The people of the United States have built and are building sixteen million tons of shipping.

Mr. Hurley, who represents the President as head of the Shipping Board, suggests that these ships, built with the people's money, be sold to private individuals for a great deal less than they cost, and that they be operated with ALL the profit to private owners, NONE to the Government.

It is even suggested that these private buyers, at bargain prices of the people's property, be permitted to put the ships under any foreign flag, which would mean that they would have the right to operate them with Chinese labor, or any other cheap labor in defiance of American labor laws and labor cost.

There never was a more outrageous suggestion made in regard to any public matter.

The farmers, and newspapers representing them, should make it their business to let Congress and the President know that the people did not pay hundreds of millions in taxes to build ships to be turned over at bargain prices to private individuals, that those private individuals might exploit farmers, the manufacturers and American exports and imports generally.

THE TONIC OF THE SPRING

Have you ever tried to get in tune with Springtime nature?

Have you ever tried to take on the bright, joyous feeling which is indicated by the songs of the birds?

Does not the very nature of Spring make you feel like expanding, like doing more in the way of unusual achievement than you have done ever before.

Does the brightness of its activity make you feel bigger and better?

Does not the freshness of everything make you want to make a fresh start?

With that fresh start have you not more confidence to go on?

Take a car if the distance is too great to walk, and go out into the country district, and breathe and put yourself in a receptive mood to take advantage of what God provides for jaded spirits.

Let the bird songs touch your heart, listen to the beginnings of a new season, get in harmony and grow better and bigger,

More Truth Than Poetry

Cactus Center Learns Something

CHARLES DENVER

DOWN here in Cactus Center we are bogged in puzzlement;
A fashion question's got us where we're on the ropes, quite spent.
It was started by the schoolma'am, who has come here from the East;
Though it's long months since it hit us, the debate has never ceased.
It arose because last Winter, when we grabbed the fur-lined coat,
The schoolma'am braved the blizzards with no wrap around her throat;
And now, when Summer's with us, on the street she never stirs
Without her neck encircled with a full-sized set of furs.

WE thought at first we'd buy her something for the Winter's blast,
Thinkin' she was poor but prideful—but that fool idea soon passed,
For she froze our haltin' spokesman when the talk of furs was broached,
And he beat it for the background, wishin' he had not approached.
When she bobbed up in the Summer, wrapped up to her saucy chin,
Then her sanity was questioned, and we voted it a sin
Not to put the pore weak critter in a padded-cell retreat,
Thus preservin' her from danger, first from cold and then from heat.

BUT we sure was all dumfounded when a tenderfoot arose
And remarked, "You gents know cattle, but you don't know women's clothes."
And he then went on to tell us that such doin's are the style
In the land of the tall tepees and the crowded haunts of guile.
He convinced the most progressive, but a section still holds out;
It's mostly the old-timers, and they shake their heads in doubt
When the schoolma'am walks among us, with her fox furs, on parade,
And the mercury jest touchin' eighty-seven in the shade'

By K. C. B.

American Expeditionary Forces, No. 47 Russell Square, London, W. C. I.:

DEAR K. C. B.—
THE OTHER day.
IN LONDON town.
I RECEIVED a letter.
FROM ACROSS the seas.
JUST FILLED to the brim.
WITH NEWS and love.
AND IN with the lot.
WERE SOME K. C. B.'s.
AND I'VE read them all.
AND SENT them along.
SO THAT others may read.
AND YOUR note to the nurse.
HAS GONE its way.
TO A sweet-faced girl.
WHO NEEDED it.
AND THE "don't worry" column.
IS CHEERING a lad.
WHO LOOKS in vain.
FOR LETTERS from home.
AND THE "little farm house."
IN THE "low foothills."
THE "CALF and the chickens."
BOTH FRIENDLY and wild.
BROUGHT A tear and a smile.
TO A khaki clad boy.
WHO YEARNS for the freedom.
OF LONG country lanes.
FOR THE milk time at dusk.
AND THE clear, starry nights.
AND THE dinners on Sunday.
THAT WOMEN folks cook.
AND SO it happened.
THAT EACH of your writings.
THAT CAME over to me.
HAS GONE on its way.
TO A definite one.
WHO HAS felt it was meant.
AS A message to him.
AND EACH as he read.
HAS SENT back to you.
A SILENT "I thank you."
FOR WHAT you sent him.
AND LAST it may be.
IN THE bustle of things.
AND THE rush of your work.
THAT YOU might not know.
THE PLEASURE they've brought.
I'M SETTING it down.
WITH SOME good U. S. ink.
AND MAILING it on.
WITH A lot of good wishes.
TO YOU and the farm.
AND THE folks on the farm.
AND THE chickens and things.
NOT OMITTING the calf.
IN THAT far-away land.
THE LAND of our dreams.
AND JUST as I'm writing.
A YOUNG soldier boy.
FROM THE hills that you know.
HAS LOOKED on the paper.
AND ASKED me to say.
THAT THE sky over here.
ISN'T NEARLY as high.
AS THE sky over there.
AND THE stars aren't as bright.
AND HE wants to go home.
TO THE chickens and things.
THAT HE left over there.
WHEN HE came over here.
AND HE'S adding his thanks.
TO THE thanks that I've sent.
AND FOR him.
AND FOR us.

I THANK you,

BLACK HEART THAT MAKES MOCKERY OF LOVE

By Winifred Black

HAVE you been reading the news from Seattle lately?

There's always lots of news from Seattle—things seem to happen up there—good things and bad things, new things and old things. Men come into Seattle with stories of gold strikes up in Alaska in the frozen north, and Eskimos drift in there now and again with strange tales of Indian saints and Eskimo martyrs. But this time the story is about a girl.

Just an every-day American girl, rather pretty and not in any way remarkable to look at—but everybody's looking at her just now.

She fell in love, did this girl—oh, desperately, madly, passionately in love! She didn't care whether she lived or whether she died; she couldn't eat and she couldn't sleep, and she wouldn't work. All she wanted was to see the man she liked and have him tell her that he loved her, not once but a hundred times every day.

How he was to earn his own living while he accomplished this feat, this young person never seems to have thought.

Why should she think? She was in love, and that was enough for her.

It was lovely to be in love, the moon was brighter, and the sunshine clearer, and all the little rosebuds were sweeter—they make a specialty of roses in Seattle—and, oh, everything was too sad and too sweet, and too romantic and too lovely and too all-overish for words—only there was one thing that was a little annoying.

The man was married, and the worst of it was his wife was in love with him and she wouldn't hear of a divorce.

What Troubles Her

It was very hard for the girl to realize that any one could be so selfish—love such as hers is such an overmastering, glorifying thing that no one who has ever experienced it can understand selfishness at all in any form, but the girl did her best.

She expostulated with the wife, she sent her messages and told her how foolish she was and all that sort of thing, and one day she invited the wife to come and have luncheon with her and talk things over, and the wife accepted the invitation. She was young, too, and pretty, and a good deal in love with her husband, they say. And when the wife arrived at the luncheon she sat down and began to eat, but before she had taken many mouthfuls of a very delicious fruit cocktail, she fell to the floor in a convulsion, and very soon afterward—she died.

For the girl had put poison in the fruit cocktail.

At first the girl said the wife must have committed suicide, but afterward she admitted that she had poisoned the fruit, and now she's in prison and she says that she isn't at all worried about what she has done.

Search the Heart

Not many girls like that? Oh, I don't know. I believe there are a good many of them at heart—they're not all of them quite courageous enough to carry out their theories to the fullest extent, but theoretically they are quite in sympathy with the girl in Seattle who wants so badly to know whether this particular man really loves her or not.

I saw one of these girls yesterday. She was at luncheon with the husband of her dearest friend, and the way she was looking at that husband and trying to get that husband to look at her!

Shallow hearts, cold blood, dead consciousness, utter selfishness, complete egotism—that's what this kind of love has meant since the world began and will mean till the world ends. No wonder it sometimes leads to cruel, savage, cold-blooded murder.

Admiration Makes Courage

The 90 and 9

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 119.

The flight across the ocean completes the physical conquest of earth by the human race. Earth, air, water and under the water, all belong to man. He is now able to do his prospecting thoroughly. The next thing is to put his property in order, drain it, irrigate, regulate its climate, all that will keep men busy for many centuries to come, after men shall have finished murdering each other in war, robbing each other in republics, persecuting each other in the name of religion, etc.

The flying machine is the only great invention and improvement that human stupidity has not objected to in the beginning.

The steam engine and locomotive were denounced. Even as intelligent a man as Ruskin despised the railroad because he thought it hurt scenery.

Looms, and all spinning machinery, like all labor-saving devices, were bitterly, ignorantly and brutally fought by workers who thought that these machines would take away their work and lower their wages.

You that read that can remember when the prosperous class rode on bicycles with pneumatic tires and the less prosperous scattered glass and tacks on the road to demonstrate their fitness to live in civilization.

This writer years ago used to beseech the poorer class to allow the wealthier to develop the bicycle, inasmuch as one day the well to do would tire of pumping with their legs, and workmen would inherit the bicycle.

That has happened.

It was the same with the automobile, more scattering of tacks and broken class. And it was necessary to point out that the day would come when the "White Ghost," driven by Mr. Vanderbilt, for excitement, would be replaced by the every day little puffing machine, driven by Mr. Mechanic, for fresh air.

Year after year improvements have been fought by the human race, including the printing press, and even the discovery of chloroform and other anaesthetics, making possible surgical operations without pain.

The pious said that God wanted us to suffer, so we had no right to interfere with His plans by taking chloroform when we had a leg cut off.

The flying machine is the one exception. It roused no jealousy, no selfish fear on the part of workers, not even a superstitious protest from fanatics objecting to men going up higher than the location to which the Lord originally assigned them. That is a good sign. Civilization will begin when men learn to welcome ideas, instead of fighting them.

There was great rejoicing over the lost sheep that was found wandering, more fuss made about him than about the ninety and nine. So it is with flying men that try to cross the ocean. There will be infinitely more fuss made about the plucky Hawker and his helper Grieve, who tried and failed, than about the successful man. What we admire in this world is desperate audacity; calculating, courageous efficiency comes number two.

The man that jumped into the volcano's mouth to die mysteriously, the slave that set fire to the great temple of Diana at Ephesus, the French fighter that hung onto the rope of the enemies' row boat with the stump of his arms, after his hands had been cut off. Wolf and Montcalm, dying in the same battle, not living to enjoy their glory. Nathan Hale, and Major Andre, each standing with the rope around his neck. John Brown, hanged as a failure. Uncle Tom, whipped to death and going up to Heaven in the transfiguration scene with Little Eva—those are the things we admire. It is a good thing that we do, as the admiration of others encourages men to try. How many men risk their lives courageously with no one looking on? Any woman will do it, to save her child. Few men are heroic without "gallery."

Four more little peoples ask for freedom; the Lithuanians, Ukrainians, Letts, and Esthonians.

Strong mental, physical and moral qualities are in those words.

The Lithuanians, Ukrainians, Lets and the Esthonians at home would not enter into an agreement that would make it possible for the United States to bring them over here, and have them shot by thousands in case we got into trouble with Mexico or Japan. They understand that the people of the United States will not sanction an agreement that would make it possible to conscript young men from this country, and send them to Europe, to fill thousands of graves, in order to keep the fourteen points everlastingly alive. If a little man said to you "I want to start in business for myself next door to Marshal Field's and give that concern a run for its money" you would say, "You have my blessing. I will even lend you money. But don't expect me to come and run the business for you, after you discover what sort of competition you have invited."
